B.C. Coast 'Perturbed', Wants More Defence

By BRUCE HUTCHISON
OTTAWA (Vancouver Sun Special)—In its plans to defend Canada the government tends to overlook the needs of the Pacific coast, Tom Reid of New Westminster warned the House of Commons. More naval units are required in British Columbia and besides that Mr. Reid says strong action to prevent sabotage by the peoples of other nations. No one had any doubt as to Mr. Reid's reference. It was made a few hours before Foreign Minister Arita of Japan proclaimed a Japanese Monroe doctrine of the Orient.

SABOTAGE MENACE

The fact that there has been no sabotage yet does not mean, Mr. Reid said, that there will be none. To prevent it he urged the government to recognize the civilian defence units already set up. They should not be left to operate as civilian units, he urged, but should be tied into military operations.

"Perhaps," he said, "they could be drafted into the militia units. I do not intend to mention the many vulnerable points of British Columbia because this should not be made public on the floor of the House. But we are greatly perturbed."

NEED MORE UNITS HERE

"I trust the Minister of Justice and the government will give consideration to the representations which are being made by the Attorney-General of British Columbia."

Mr. Reid also urged the government to take action to save the B.C. fishing industries for the loss of the sockeye salmon pack. If the government is going to subsidize and underwrite the Atlantic fishing industry, the cheese industry, the hog industry, and the apple industry, it certainly ought to come to the aid of the B.C. fishing industry by guaranteeing economic prices to the canners and fishermen, he declared, but he indicated that British Columbia's drive for this policy pressed hard by B.C. members of Parliament this week has not yet achieved that. He had been told nothing could be done. The livelihood of 90,000 fishermen was involved, he warned, and failure to assist these men would "cause more unrest on the coast."

Canadian Sailors Heroes When Fraser Cut in Half

'You Were Great,' Creery Tells Men

By SAM ROBERTSON

LONDON (CP)—A sister ship of the ill-starred Canadian destroyer H.M.C.S. Fraser gambled against the chance of drawing enemy fire and performed a "miracle of navigation" to snatch from death most of the officers and men who survived the tragic collision.

40 Men Rescued As Searchlights Used

Then she flooded the tumbling seas with the full power of her searchlights, despite the certainty she would draw any aircraft or seacraft in the vicinity, and rescued another 40 who were tossing in the waves.

"The commander and men of our sister ship wrote a saga of the sea that compares with any rescue operation ever performed," said a thankful officer of the Fraser.

The captain of the Fraser and his first and second lieutenants were saved by a strange freak. They were on the bridge when the crash "struck like thunder." Somehow the bow of the craft that knifed through the destroyer sheared off her bridge and carried it away on the foredeck.

Three officers and five or six seamen who were on the bridge escaped with minor scratches. One of the two men in the wheelhouse was crushed to death.

More than 100 of the Fraser's crew were quartered in a large section of the destroyer that remained afloat for some time after the crash. A heavy swell was running at the time.

When the hulk did start nosing under the waves, those who had not been able to step on to the deck of the Canadian rescue ship dived and slid into the sea, which was coated with oil from the Fraser's torn tanks.

In the inky darkness the rescue ship could not see many of the oil-coated men who were swimming around. It was then that its commander daringly gambled for the lives of his fellow-Canadians against possible enemy fire and ordered the searchlights switched on.

The lights stabbing through the darkness soon picked up the seamen—some of whom had been swimming around and others floating in lifebelts. The rescue ship's lifeboats and rafts then brought them to safety.

Youth Kept Afloat For 2½ Hours

One of the Fraser's boy seamen, a young French-Canadian from Montreal, who quit an electrical apprenticeship to join the navy less than a year ago, said: "I dog-paddled and floated almost 2½ hours, before the lifeboat found me."

He was believed to be the last man picked up. Many others were in the water, gummy with oil, almost as long.

Tragedy struck the Fraser when she was a short distance off Bordeaux, hunting down any enemy craft that might have been in the vicinity.

In the darkness, it was said, there was no chance to avoid the collision. When the craft met, the Fraser was cut in two. The forepart sank almost immediately, but many of those aboard that part of the warship managed to jump into the sea and were picked up by a lifeboat from the craft that had struck the Fraser her death blow.

The ill-fated destroyer was struck just about the bridge. While the forepart plummeted below the waves, the aft section, representing almost two-thirds of the craft, stayed afloat after rolling on its side.

As this section of the Fraser tossed in the angry waves, the commander of the second Canadian warship drove his ship full speed ahead alongside and somehow held her so close that a member of the rescuing crew said: "We took about 50 off without them wetting their feet. They were able to step on to our deck from what was left of the Fraser above the waves."

The commander of the rescue ship ordered lifeboats lowered and rafts tossed into the sea. Men on the stricken vessel then dived into the sea and struck out for the heaving boats and rafts. The rafts were able to hold about 20, the whalers or lifeboats upwards of 30.

During the rescue operations one lifeboat caught in the suction of a propeller and capsized. All but one of the lifeboat crew of six were picked up. It is believed that all members of the destroyed warship who encountered this second mishap were saved.

After all the survivors were removed from the floating hulk, the Canadian commander of the rescue ship sent a party to strip the Fraser's safe of money and official records and sink the vessel as a menace to navigation.

After the money and records had been taken from the safe the salvage wrecking crew set time bombs in what was left of the Fraser. They returned to the ship with news that the collision had caught many of its victims while they were enjoying their hours off duty in the mess.

When the rescued seamen and refugees reached England the surviving officers and men of the Fraser whose injuries did not require hospital treatments were given 14 days' leave. They dispersed to all parts of the United Kingdom for relaxation to forget the tragedy they had come through.

Crew Praised By Commander

A SOUTHWEST BRITISH PORT (CP)—When more than 100 survivors of the Canadian destroyer Fraser were landed here from Canadian and British warships a service was held in honor of the memory of the 45 members of the crew who are dead or missing.

Afterwards Commander Wallace B. Creery, obviously stricken with grief, spoke to his assembled crew. "Thank you, you were great," he said quietly to the men who with him had been snatched from the jaws of death.

Every man was granted 14 days' leave and issued a complete new outfit of clothing and personal kit. They had lost everything.

About 20 injured survivors were taken to a hospital in this port.

As the seamen dispersed they said they were determined to stay as a crew now that disaster had welded them into a body and many said: "If we join any ship after leave we want to join it together."

On a sides there was nothing but praise for the commander. "He was a great guy, the best skipper a man could have," one survivor said.

'Roll Out the Barrel' Sings Wrecked Crew

"Frenchy" slept through the crash and then led his shipmates in "Roll Out the Barrel" while they were perched on the overturned hulk awaiting rescue.

"Frenchy" is Lawrence Boleau, 22, turned 19, from Montreal. He was serving an apprenticeship in an electrical repair shop when war came. He promptly changed his overalls for a suit of navy blue.

Final Bulletins

GERMANY, ITALY TO STOP RUSSIANS?

BUCHAREST (AP)—Germany and Italy were said to have "high authority" tonight to have assured Rumania they would prevent any further Red army advances into King Carol's kingdom.

The informants, who are close to the palace and cabinet, declared the governments at Rome and Berlin had promised Rumania land and air assistance if Russia made further attempts to overstep the line of territorial demarcation agreed on by Carol in ceding Bessarabia and northern Bukovina to the Soviet.

(Earlier dispatches said Russian tanks and infantry which passed the line accepted by Carol had driven farther today into old Rumania itself.)

French, Nazis Meet

BERLIN (AP)—French and German armistice commissions held preliminary discussions today at Wiesbaden, it was learned this evening. An Italian delegation participated.

Fleet Off Bosphorus

ISTANBUL (AP)—The Turkish fleet resumed its position at the mouth of the Bosphorus this evening after a Black Sea cruise which was interpreted as a warning to Bulgaria that Turkey was ready to defend itself.

The fleet had sailed past the southern tip of Bulgaria's Black Sea coast.

Many Chinese Drowned

LONDON (CP)—A Reuters' News Agency dispatch from Chungking tonight said 80 Japanese bombers sank many junks in the Yangtze River and drowned an undetermined number of boatmen in a raid today—the sixth on the provisional Chinese capital this week.

Oppose Doctrine

WASHINGTON (AP)—Strong indications were given this afternoon the United States had no intention of concurring in the Japanese "Monroe Doctrine" for the Far East enunciated by Foreign Minister Arita.

The United States government in the past opposed Japan's plans for a "new order in Asia" and officials indicated there had been no change in the policy.

BRITISH SINK 9th ITALIAN SUB

LONDON (CP)—An Admiralty communique today said: "The commander-in-chief, East Indies, reports further successes by his forces. Two more Italian U-boats have been destroyed." (Previously seven Italian submarines had been announced as sunk. Italy had 104 submarines in September, 1939.)

LONDON (CP)—The Royal Air Force bombed objectives in Germany, France and the Netherlands yesterday, damaging chemical factories, railway yards, canal traffic and airdromes, the Air Ministry announced tonight.

Manor Lord Detained

LONDON (CP)—Capt. George Henry Lane Fox Pitt-Rivers, Lord of the Manor of Hinton, St. Mary, and former officer of the Royal Dragoons and former private secretary and A.D.C. to the Governor-General of Australia, has been detained under defence regulations, it was disclosed late today. His mother was a daughter of Lord Henry Thynne.

Willkie on Yacht

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Wendell Willkie this afternoon left Philadelphia on a yacht after indicating he would delay formal acceptance of the Republican presidential nomination until after the Democratic National Convention, starting in Chicago July 15.

LADY MOSLEY JAILED IN ENGLAND

LONDON (CP)—Lady Mosley, wife of Sir Oswald Mosley and sister of Unity Freeman-Mitford, Hitler's girl friend, was arrested today at her home, Savoy Farm, Benham, Buckinghamshire.

Plainclothes men detained Lady Mosley under defence regulations. Her husband, Sir Oswald, was jailed May 23.

Sir Oswald is the leader of the British Fascists. Miss Freeman-Mitford is an admirer of Hitler, who returned to England from Munich in January suffering from a bullet wound in her neck which never was publicly explained. She and Lady Mosley are daughters of Lord Redesdale.

Lady Mosley and her first husband, Byran Guinness, were divorced in 1933. Sir Oswald's first wife was Lady Cynthia Curzon, who died in 1933.

Youngest Sailor Pulls Fuses, Saves Shipmates

LONDON (CP)—The heroism of a 17-year-old Canadian saved the lives of scores of his shipmates as the stricken destroyer Fraser plunged about the inky waters off France after the collision that destroyed her.

The hulk of the Canadian destroyer would have been blown sky high by her own deadly load of depth charges, carrying with it surviving members of the crew, if A. L. Jones of White Rock, B.C., the youngest member of the ship's company, had not rendered them harmless.

Jones, at the stern of the ship when it was sliced in two, was hurled to the deck by the force of the collision. As he regained consciousness he heard a yell to "make the depth charges safe." Although he had no knowledge of depth charges—he is a gunnery apprentice—Jones snuffed out all of the many "fused" charges that threatened to blow up at the slightest impact.

A few minutes after the final depth charge was "killed," the second Canadian warship jammed herself alongside the Fraser with an impact that glued the two ships together. All the survivors were taken off safely.

According to young Jones, it was nothing at all. "Anyone would have done it," he said. The fact that his courage and promptitude had made the death toll much smaller had not occurred to the sun-tanned lad who a few months ago was a carrier for the newspaper Daily Province of Vancouver. The Fraser was his first ship.

Hongkong to Evacuate Women, Children

British Crown Colony City of Victoria on Hongkong Island, with Kowloon peninsula and city of Kowloon in the background.

HONGKONG (CP)—Compulsory removal of all European women and children from Hongkong in the next week was decreed today.

This evacuation order followed other steps taken this week by British authorities to safeguard the colony against aggression by Japanese land forces now occupying Chinese territory opposite and virtually surrounding the city.

British army spokesmen said bridges connecting Hongkong to the Japanese-held Chinese territory have been blown up "as a purely precautionary measure." This British action follows reports that hostilities had begun in French Indo-China and dispatch of Japanese fleet to French Indo-China.

'No Use Mincing Words'

SHANGHAI (AP)—Sir Archibald C. Kerr, British ambassador to China, said in a broadcast today that the British government soon will announce "a plan whereby Britons in China and elsewhere in the Far East will be enabled to offer their services to the government.

The ambassador said: "There is no use mincing words. We face great peril. But we have stood in similar peril before, and we are not alone, but enjoy the promise of the boundless resources of our empire and our friends."

Just as the part of the Fraser that remained afloat started turning on its side.

"Must have been about 100 there ahead of us," Frenchy recalled in a mixture of English and French. "It felt so good to get into the air and see so many pals alive, well, I just had to sing. 'Roll Out the Barrel' was the first tune that came to mind, so I started whooping it up and soon most of the others chorused in."

His mates said that while "Frenchy's" voice was "pretty punk," the idea was great. Singing kept the spirits high.

Mr. and Mrs. William Burnfield, 3217 Wordsworth Street, were notified yesterday of the death of their son, George W. Burnfield, 19, able seaman serving aboard H.M.C.S. Restigouche, a sister-ship of H.M.C.S. Fraser, which was lost off Bordeaux, in European waters.

The cable, signed by the commanding officer of the Restigouche, did not state how Able Seaman Burnfield met his death.

Young Burnfield was born at Holden, Alta., came to Victoria six years ago with his parents and was educated at the Cedar Hill School. He joined the navy two years ago.

Besides his parents he has one sister and three brothers residing here, Alice and Donald, Gordon and Stanley.

It was only last April that young Burnfield was home on leave from Halifax, N.S.

Three days ago his parents received a letter from him stating he was on leave in London.

Trans-Canada Link Pattullo Opens Big Bend Road

—BOAT—ENCAMPMENT, B.C. (CP)—Premier T. D. Pattullo today declared officially open the Big Bend highway which will provide the prairie provinces with a new outlet to the Pacific coast.

Speaking here, midway between Revelstoke and Golden, on the 193-mile stretch of new road, the Premier paid tribute to the long-lasting friendship between Canada and the United States. Then he cut the tape which set traffic rolling.

Mr. Pattullo expressed sorrow for the victims of aggression and added "our determined resolution goes out to the tight little isle, the heart of the British Empire, which unflinchingly and with undaunted spirit holds the gateway of freedom and liberty against the most ruthless onslaught of all times."

Delegations from Alberta and British Columbia attended the ceremonies along with several members of the provincial Legislature and civic officials.

Opening of the road realized a project long under discussion. The route, first surveyed in 1927, completed the western section of the Trans-Canada Highway and opens a newer and shorter way from British Columbia to resorts at Banff and Lake Louise.

De Gaulle Forecasts Invasion of Germany

LONDON (CP)—Gen. Charles de Gaulle calculates that when Britain has constructed 20,000 tanks and 20,000 warplanes, Germany can be invaded and defeated, Professor Denis Saurat, head of the French Institute in London, reports.

A representative of Gen. de Gaulle, leader of the French "fight on" movement, said "we have already in this country many highly trained air officers, men and machines."

Gen. de Gaulle was recognized last night by the British government as "leader of all free Frenchmen." The general's spokesman said recruiting for a French Legion probably will begin next week.

The general declared the French high command was to blame for the army's defeat because it used 1914 methods against a 1940 military machine.

He said the French army was organized to defend the front to the last man, but that it was not prepared to fight where there was no front, where the enemy was behind him on both left and right.

Evacuation of the civilian population in northern France was another mistake, the general said, declaring it had caused hopeless confusion.

R.A.F. Bags Couple Of Nazi Raiders

LONDON (CP)—Aircraft flying very high over southwest England drew anti-aircraft fire today and there were unconfirmed reports that Royal Air Force fighters had brought down a German bomber.

This followed raids last night and early this morning which were reported as follows in a statement from the Air Ministry and the Ministry of Home Security:

"Enemy activity over Great Britain last night was on a smaller scale. A few bombs were dropped in South Wales and near the east coast, but nothing of any importance was achieved. The only casualty reported is one person slightly hurt."

One German bomber was shot down by R.A.F. fighters over northeast England and another off the coast of Scotland.

Ulster Offers Eire Defence Unity

BELFAST (CP)—Viscount Craigavon, premier of Northern Ireland, said today he is prepared to "enter into the closest co-operation" with Prime Minister Eamon de Valera of Eire on matters of defence, "provided he takes a stand as we are doing on the side of Britain and the Empire."

In a speech, Lord Craigavon said other conditions for co-operation were that Mr. de Valera should clear out German and Italian representatives in Eire and undertake "not to raise any issues of a constitutional nature."

TORONTO (CP)—According to word received here, Robert John Bristol Renison, pilot-officer in the Royal Air Force who was recently reported missing since engaging in air operations May 18, is a prisoner of war in Germany. The information was received in a cable from London by the pilot officer's father, Bishop R. J. Renison of Toronto.

Russian Troops in Old Rumania

Hungary Ready to Move If Reds Continue Drive

BUDAPEST (AP)—Surprise advance of Russian troops into Moldavia, a part of old Rumania which was not demanded in the Soviet ultimatum, raised a new question in Hungary and Bulgaria today. Whether they must act now to get the Rumanian territory they have claimed, or run the risk of having Russia beat them to it.

The Hungarian and Bulgarian answers depend to a large extent on what Germany and Italy say. Both countries have been in close touch with the axis powers since the Balkan crisis started, and their cabinets held long sessions yesterday.

Official quarters here said the Hungarian forces would continue across the border into Transylvania, former Hungarian territory which she now claims from her neighbor, with "full axis support" if the Russians should continue their drive toward the Carpathian Mountains.

HITLER'S IDEA

But German sources in the Balkans indicated Hitler at this time would prefer to keep the situation quiet. This attitude on the part of the Nazis, however, might be changed if Russia should go too far.

Bulgaria is in a somewhat different position from Hungary because of her traditional friendship with Russia. She may have had assurances that Russia will not interfere with her claim to Dobruja.

A communiqué announcing the government is continuing its policy of "nonintervention in the troubles of its neighbors" was interpreted as meaning Bulgaria has no intention of taking action at present.

Invading Forces Far Beyond Line

BUCHAREST (AP)—The Red army's occupation of Rumanian territories ceded by King Carol was transformed abruptly into actual invasion today as Soviet tanks and infantry drove farther into old Rumania itself.

Through its minister to Moscow, Rumania yesterday agreed to evacuate Bessarabia and northern Bukovina without opposition. But King Carol met the threat of deeper Soviet penetrations, and the joint dangers of further territorial demands from mobilized Hungary and Bulgaria, with an order for mobilization "to the last man" and a call for an emergency session of parliament this afternoon.

The Soviet occupation of Bessarabia and northern Bukovina brought bloodshed. At Cernauti, 15 miles south of the border of Polish Russia, anti-Communist civilian snipers fired on advance tank units of the Soviet army, and were not dispersed until Russian infantry arrived in force. At an undisclosed point on the Bessarabian-Russian frontier, Rumanian troops opened fire with machine guns on Russian infantrymen.

The fighting at Cernauti, a city of 110,000 population, began as a skirmish between Communists and anti-Communist civilians.

Arrival of the Russian tanks, which went charging into street barricades, drove the anti-Communist forces to house-tops. Scores of civilians were killed and wounded before the Red infantry was able to break this resistance.

Prut River Made Test Line

The Russian advances into old Rumania from the Cernauti area were reported to have reached the towns of Dorohlo and Botoshan in Moldavia, 45 and 25 miles, respectively, beyond the river Prut, the western boundary of Bessarabia.

The Bulgarian newspaper Outro in Sofia previously had declared that Germany would take "action" if the Russians should go beyond the Prut.

Rumanian mobilization, which started at midnight last night and is expected to be completed in two days, was proclaimed shortly after receipt of an official Hungarian news agency communiqué announcing the Hungarian government had decided "to make control more severe all along the Rumanian border and to order frontier chasseur troops to advance" because of the unclear situation in Rumania.

Bulgaria Adds To Border Forces

SOFIA (AP)—The Bulgarian government maintained reserve toward the Rumanian situation today. Garrison forces on the Rumanian frontier have been tripled from their 10,000-man strength of a week ago.

Ivan Stamenoff, confidante of King Boris, was appointed Bulgarian minister in Moscow. Stamenoff's wife was born in Bessarabia.

RUSSIANS CLOSE PORTS

NEW YORK (AP)—A British Broadcasting Corporation report today said Soviet Russia had closed three of her Black Sea ports, including the oil port of Batum. The report was heard here by the National Broadcasting Company.

Odessa, Russia's principal Black Sea port, was named as another of those closed. The name of the third could not be heard distinctly, the NBC reported.

Odessa is on the northern coast near the Rumanian border. Batum is in the Caucasus close to the Turkish frontier.

BOMB TRICK

LONDON — Authoritative quarters called the attention of the public to the fact that the high explosive bomb that German raiders were using was not new, nor did it carry more explosive than the bomb used by the R.A.F.

However, fluting on the bomb gives it a sound in the air which has caused it to be nicknamed the whistling bomb, or the screaming terror and it convinces a person that the bomb has his name on it and is following him.

Actually, military authorities said, "all bombs whistle coming down" and thus give "the listener ample time to lie flat" if he happens to be caught where no shelter is available.

Finland, Russia
Sign Trade Pact

HELSINKI (AP) — Signing at Moscow of a trade agreement between Finland and Soviet Russia was announced today. Well-informed sources said Finland obtained "favorable" points.

These sources declared the pact included adjustment of Soviet war indemnity claims. Details were not disclosed.

One informant said the treaty brought a feeling of relief in Finland as recent Russian activity in the Baltic states following closely on the Russo-Finnish war had aroused apprehension.

Could Localize Hitler

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Key Pittman, Democrat, Nevada, believes that an "understanding" between the combined British-French fleet and that of the United States could "localize Hitler in Europe."

Pittman, chairman of the Senate foreign-relations committee, said in an interview there would "never be an alliance between the United States and Great Britain," but that "an understanding between the dominant fleets will be sufficient."

The combined British-French fleet would dominate one ocean while that of the United States would control another, the Nevada said.

He added it was his "guess" that British and French fleets might be moving westward soon.

2-year Sentence
On Defence Count

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mrs. Elizabeth Bronny was sentenced to two years in prison and fined $500 in county court here yesterday when convicted of a breach of the Defence of Canada regulations.

Officials testified at the trial that the woman, who they said had a 20-year-old son in Germany and whose husband was interned at the beginning of the war after representing the Nazi Party in Vancouver, had possession of maps of the Kananaskis, Alta., enemy internment camp.

The maps were found, together with documents purporting to show Mrs. Bronny to be a member of the Nazi Party, when her home was raided by authorities May 25.

NICE, France (AP) — Somerset Maugham, noted British novelist and playwright, is reported to have reached Lisbon safely after leaving France in a refugee-crowded vessel. Previously he had been reported missing.

Nazi Invasion Plans Revealed

The Watch

What Nazis underestimate—the spirit and determination of Britain.

John T. Whittaker of the Chicago Daily News staff in a special cable says he has learned from high German quarters while in Rome some details of the Nazi plans for the invasion of England. Whittaker says the Germans are to attempt to land 100,000 men in England from aircraft and Diesel-engine barges, after intensive bombing.

They hope to follow up the initial attack with the landing of two or three Nazi divisions in Scotland or the north of England. As the British forces turn north against these, the Germans think that another six or eight divisions could be landed in force along the coastline from barges which, they say, proved their efficacy against Norway, and which they describe as an effective substitute for naval power.

These barges, copied from types first used on American canals, have such a small displacement that tanks and artillery canions can be run ashore directly from the scows without chains or harbor facilities. The Diesel engines can drive the barges to shore and hold them there with churning propellers. It is said, while mechanized equipment is driven off under its own power.

U.S. Groups Prepare To Leave Hongkong

HONGKONG (CP) — Families of Americans engaged here in the naval, military and diplomatic services will be removed to Manila Monday, authoritative sources reported today, because of apprehension over possible trouble between Britain and Japan.

Arrangements will be made for the removal later of wives and children of other Americans employed here, if deemed expedient, it was said.

The United States liner President Coolidge, docked at Hongkong today on route from San Francisco to Manila. United States officials previously were reported to have asked the State Department in Washington for permission to hold the ship until further notice, presumably to facilitate the evacuation plans.

Nazis Eye South America

NEW YORK (AP) — A German broadcast heard by the Columbia Broadcasting System this morning promised South American countries "a powerful rise in their economic life from the new order in Europe" on condition that they maintain a "positive and friendly attitude."

Currency Fine

CLOVERDALE, B.C. (CP) — Mrs. Anna Imelman, 63-year-old former Prince Rupert, B.C., hotel keeper, was fined $100 in police court here yesterday afternoon when convicted of attempting to take $1,550 in Canadian currency from the country without a license.

She was arrested at the international border Thursday by Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who said she had sold her hotel efforts depends, of course, on an absolute mastery of the skies. This the Germans think they can achieve now that their pilots, once scarcely the equal of British, have been perfected in the only real military school—actual fighting experience gained in Poland, Norway, the Low Countries and France.

The Germans believe, moreover, that they can repeat in England the daring and success which marked operations in Norway and Holland, where mere handfuls of men, counting on the support of the fifth column, paralyzed superior military forces. While the stubbornness with which the British will defend their own island is admitted, German quarters hope that London, with its cockney population, softened by the life of the city, could be knocked off easily, to the inevitable confusion thereafter of the whole British countryside.

ITALY'S ROLE

These German quarters probably are too confident, especially when they speak with contempt of the British soldier as "an amateur, with neither the genius nor the training of the French."

If weeks of air preparation against England make it possible for Hitler to attempt to follow the optimistic forecasts of German quarters in Rome, Italy is expected to play an important part in German plans. Italy's light, fast navy, according to the plan, is to keep the British fleet preoccupied in the Mediterranean. Italy's 117 submarines are being augmented by mosquito boats—new, all-steel speedboats carrying four torpedoes each, so that any movement of British naval forces risks heavy losses.

FACE DILEMMA

The British would be placed in the dilemma, the Axis powers believe, of using only a portion of their naval strength against attempted German landings in England, or of denuding their potential Mediterranean allies of the naval support almost vital to this area.

The value of Italy as an Axis ally is greatly strengthened not only by her fleet, the Italians insist, but also by the fact that she keeps Britain busy from the Indian Ocean to the Alps.

The Italians have marked the British as their special foe and they are keen to assume as large a share as possible in the attempted destruction of the Empire.

England could only be saved, Axis quarters say, by American intervention and, fortunately, they add, America is now engaged in an internal political struggle.

He will make a pictorial record of the activities of Canada's soldiers in Britain.

It was also learned that Eric Gibb of Edmonton has been named assistant director of public relations at Canadian military headquarters. Gibb, feature writer and artist, has worked on several Canadian newspapers and now is on the London Sketch.

OTTAWA (CP) — Lieut.-Col. W. E. L. Coleman, officer in charge of records at national defence headquarters, will be president of the awards board and Capt. A. C. Chadwick of the records office will be secretary. It was announced here.

Duties of the board, formed in 1919 to replace the medal claims board created in 1898, are to investigate and submit to the adjutant-general all recommendations for four decorations—the Canadian efficiency decoration, the Canadian efficiency medal, the meritorious service medal and the long service and good conduct medal.

Heavy Blow for Italians

Balbo Dies With Plane
Destroyed by British

ROME (AP) — The Italian high command issued the following special communique today:

"While flying over Tobruk during an enemy bombardment on June 28 the plane piloted by Italo Balbo (Governor of Libya) crashed in flames. Italo Balbo and the members of the crew perished."

"Flags of the armed forces of Italy are lowered in a sign of homage and high honor to the memory of Italo Balbo, Alpine volunteer in the Great War, one of the quadrumvirate of the revolution, trans-Atlantic flier and air marshal, who died at his post in combat."

Whether the enemy attack referred to was from the sea or air was not immediately disclosed.

Banners in Fascist headquarters were ordered covered with crepe in mourning.

The Italian broadcasting system was silent for two minutes after the announcement of the death.

Balbo in 1933 led a mass flight of Italian planes to Canada and the United States. He received such an ovation both abroad and at home as a result of the flight that Premier Mussolini was rumored to have been displeased at his rapid rise in popular favor. Shortly after his return he was appointed to the Libyan post, a move interpreted in some quarters as designed to remove him from the limelight.

The dashing black-bearded flier was one of Fascism's celebrities and sometimes was mentioned as a possible successor to Mussolini. Since going to Libya, however, his name has been heard less often in this connection.

Balbo and Mussolini first became friends during the first Great War. After the armistice Balbo organized the blackshirt militia in his native region of Ferrara and Emilia.

He was appointed a commander of Fascist military action squad and, when Mussolini staged his "march" on Rome in October, 1922, Balbo was a leader.

When the success of the revolution was established, he was made Minister of National Economy and general of the black-shirt militia. In that capacity he was credited with "inventing" the Fascists' castor oil treatment for their adversaries.

In swift succession he was appointed to the posts of Under-Secretary for Air, general of the air fleet and Air Minister.

The Fraser

THESE ARE HEAVY HOURS FOR those who lost loved ones when H.M. C.S. Fraser met her end off Bordeaux. They may rest assured that Canadians everywhere will keep them especially in mind as they reflect upon this tragic reminder that the Dominion really is on active service. To the many Victorians who are grieving today this newspaper extends its sincere sympathy.

It is true that for the moment the part Canada is able to play in the war at sea is pooled with the gigantic task which the Royal Navy is discharging in the face of untold handicaps and hardships. But small and unspectacular though that role may be, it has its vitally useful place; and when the full story has been told of the work of the gallant Fraser and her sister ships the fine account which the lads from the land of the Maple Leaf gave of themselves will, to some extent, afford a measure of satisfaction to those who are left to mourn.

Long before the war in Europe began in earnest, of course, the ships of the Canadian Navy had rendered yeoman service on convoy duty. Only those who understand what this efficient guardianship of the supply lifeline has meant to the Empire's cause realize fully how valuable has been the achievement of the Dominion's fighting ships.

Our New Highway Link

BRITISH COLUMBIA'S BIG BEND SECTION of the Trans-Canada Highway opened for business today after a long and patient wait by the people of this province. Premier Pattullo performed the interesting ceremony at Boat Encampment, deputizing for Hon. T. A. Crerar, Dominion Minister of Natural Resources, whose presence of business at Ottawa prevented him from making the journey west.

With the opening of this final western link in a great highway system, coupled with the facilities of the Banff-Jasper road, British Columbia's tourist industry will enter a new and important stage which should promise considerable expansion for one of the province's most lucrative activities. In recent years, of course, the attractions of our mountain playgrounds have been exhaustively publicized in practically every part of the western hemisphere. The two trans-continental railway systems, the National Parks Bureau, and the travel branch of the public service have conducted an excellent campaign of enlightenment. But until now some of the most entrancing areas have not been accessible to the motorist. Today's ceremony, however, has turned the key in the gate of a new wonderland.

The effect on tourist travel from the western states of the neighboring republic—which flows both ways through the older sections of British Columbia—should be apparent immediately the significance of today's ceremonial is appreciated and its importance to the holidaymaker fully realized. The highways in question, moreover, will likewise serve the cause of Canadian solidarity and understanding, in addition to furnishing British Columbia with new income at a time when the provincial exchequer requires it more urgently than ever.

Balkans Remain Cloudy

TOO MANY IFS AND BUTS CONTINUE to bedevil the march of events in Rumania to permit anything but a hazy speculation on immediate or future probabilities. Hungary has warned Russia that if Soviet troops continue their march beyond the radius stipulated in the ultimatum to Bucharest they will be met with the force of Hungarian arms. The government at Budapest, of course, is fearful lest Russia take some of the territory ceded to Rumania from the old Austria-Hungarian empire after the first Great War—the Transylvanian section which Hungary has demanded be returned to her.

On the other hand, Bulgaria also is apprehensive; she is another revisionist state smarting under the loss of the Dobruja section which fronts eastward on the Black Sea below the southernmost tip of Bessarabia, already ceded to Moscow by Bucharest and now occupied by Soviet troops. In the case of Bulgaria, however, the situation has not assumed such delicacy as in the case of Hungary. The government at Sofia is on friendly terms with that of Moscow; in other words, any conflict of political or other interests here appears to lend itself to an amicable settlement—unless troop movements should touch off a spark and extend the trouble.

What is fairly clear is that neither Germany nor Italy desires a flare-up in the Balkans at this stage. It is their wish, particularly that of Germany, the producing capacity of Rumania, Hungary and Bulgaria remain undisturbed. But if Russia's arbitrary action in the matter of Bessarabia and the northern part of Bucovina should turn out to be part of a plan to upset completely the status quo in the Balkans—for purposes not as obscure as may be supposed—Hungary and Rumania may appeal successfully for the military aid of the axis partners. Such an eventuality would certainly clarify the relations between the heads of the three totalitarian states.

Mr. Chamberlain

BRITAIN'S NATIONAL CONSERVATIVE party's executive committee on Thursday reaffirmed its "complete confidence" in Mr. Neville Chamberlain as its leader; it also expressed "warm appreciation" of the former Prime Minister's services. It will be recalled that his translation from No. 10 Downing Street to the Presidency of the Council did not affect his leadership of the party.

What will puzzle most people is how Mr. Chamberlain can continue to occupy the anomalous position in which his political chiefs have now confirmed him by their official "pat on the back." They have told him, to all intents and purposes, that he has their instruction and authority to lead the party at the next general election—normally due this year. This will unquestionably recharge the atmosphere at No. 10 Downing Street with new elements. Mr. Churchill said the other day he did not propose to indulge in harsh words or reproaches. He is wedded to his grim task, and is too mindful of the public interest and the nation's safety to say one-quarter of what sometimes must occur to his mind. But he still will be compelled to sit down at the same council table with the official leader of the party to which he belongs, the official leader whose policies during nearly three years in office he has attacked with all the verbal artillery he has been able to command.

What satisfaction Mr. Chamberlain will be able to derive from the action of the party executive, or what it was really intended to mean in the private or official sense, may not be clear until the case of the former Prime Minister has been fully aired in the House of Commons. An influential section of the British press—the Times of London excepted for understandable reasons—continues to demand his removal from the ministry altogether, as do a fairly large number of the members of both Houses, irrespective of party affiliation. We do not profess to understand the workings of the former Premier's mind. When he warned the Laborites in the House on May 9 that he would "appeal to his friends," if the opposition pressed its want-of-confidence motion, we got a fair sample of partisanship driven to the last ditch. And the pages of history, of course, are littered with eloquent proof that Toryism is singularly unsuccessful in its attempts either to read the writing on the wall, or to gauge the temper of the public. Not that we are trying to horoscope the party in whose leadership Mr. Chamberlain has just been endorsed; we are not clairvoyant.

Presuming his health and strength survive the terrible ordeal through which he is going with such magnificent courage and resolution, however, Mr. Churchill may go to the people on the next occasion as the leader of the government which stopped Hitler; and he will be allowed to wear what label he chooses. It may not even fit the label of Mr. Chamberlain's political coat. Still, it is not for us to suggest that the Conservative member for the Edgbaston division of the Borough of Birmingham, presently enjoying the "complete confidence" of his party, might do worse than gracefully retire from the cabinet and clear the air at No. 10.

What Is the Truth?

THIRTY-FIVE REPRESENTATIVES OF the Council of Social Agencies waited on the Victoria Police Commission yesterday afternoon and urged this body to stamp out prostitution in the city. Mr. Joseph McKenna handed the commission a list of five alleged disorderly houses which he contended were a source of infection, and quoted statistics in support of it. Mr. McKenna strongly urged that the Criminal Code of Canada be enforced in regard to houses of prostitution. The commission told the delegation it did not know of the places shown on Mr. McKenna's list.

There are or there are not houses of prostitution in the city of Victoria. If there are such establishments it requires only juvenile imagination to realize that there may be venereal disease not under control. And if this is the case there is danger of infection and serious consequences. Mayor MacGavin told the delegation the commission "will do the best we can to satisfy your wishes." Within 24 hours he and his colleagues can find out whether the allegations presented by that delegation are true or are without foundation in fact. If they are true the course of the commission would appear to be plain; if they are not true His Worship can invite the delegation to call again and hear the result of the commission's inquiries.

FOR US ON THE PACIFIC

From Vancouver News-Herald
This is a time for plain speaking and the plainer the better. Canada must prepare in this war to fight not upon one front abroad but to defend herself at home and that trouble on the Pacific might eventually involve us along with Australia and New Zealand.

The battle of Europe concerns us all because the traditional freedom of the west is dying under the repeated blows of Nazi aggression. The Orient must concern us because the future of the Pacific is threatened by a totalitarian aggression quite as dangerous as that of Europe and with the same boundless ambitions.

If it is true that Japanese troops have commenced operations against French Indo-China then that is very bad news indeed. For if the Japanese are able to seize or invade this French colony, where will their aggression end... the Netherlands East Indies, and after that what? If Chiang Kai Shek and a free China goes under then the free trade of the Orient—the world's greatest remaining undeveloped market—is lost to us for generations.

For the defence of the Empire interests in this vital area, the British Dominions must pool their resources now. There is no time to be lost to mobilize Canada, not only for assistance to Britain, but for the defence of the Empire in the Pacific as well.

Bruce Hutchison

BUREAUCRACY

YOU WOULDN'T KNOW Ottawa these days. Even if you were an old-timer you wouldn't recognize most of the people you see on the streets, for newcomers of every sort have descended in droves, to run Canada's war effort. It must be something like the first awful days of the New Deal in Washington, and no end in sight.

We are, in fact, building up a structure of statism, of regulation, control, planning and bureaucracy to stagger the imagination of Canada. This we must do, no question about that. The only question is whether we can ever get rid of this huge, vague, heaving form, this inevitable octopus of government whose tentacles stretch into every house throughout the land.

No one can answer that question yet, of course. It depends mostly on forces entirely beyond our control, forces unleashed by the war. But this thing had started well before the war. For years, in a timorous way, usually without knowing what I was talking about, I have been saying that the planned economy, the government-controlled state was advancing on us. Of course nobody believed me and I was never entirely sure myself. But as you look back you see that the seeds of this tangled, jungle growth of government had been planned long ago.

We had nationalized the control of credit before the war. We had guaranteed a price to the prairie farmer and could never get out of it, which meant, and will yet mean, controlling his production. We had started controlled agricultural marketing and were regulating the sale of fish products. We had put about 1,000,000 Canadians more or less permanently on relief. But there was always the hope that somehow we could reverse our steps, that the world would begin to trade again, and that in a world of trade we could become prosperous, withdraw our controls and go back to the good old ways. (Though, of course, we were never ready to make much of a contribution to this end by lowering our own tariffs.)

ENDED

WELL, THE WAR ended all these hopes for the time being at least. At once we had to advance farther and farther along the path of control, of subsidy, of sharing our scarcity among ourselves. Now see how the expanding state, the swelling government, the octopus of regulation has spread in all directions—as it must if we are to fight a modern war.

The government is in control of our greatest industry, wheat. It controls the bacon industry; cheese exports, has controlled apples and probably will do so again, is supervising the sale of many fish products.

Lately it issued a kindly-worded set of "principles" to govern capital and labor and everybody recognized them as an order. Those who break the principles will find that the state can enforce them.

We have controllers of sugar, wool, coal, timber, steel and oil. True, the industries covered by these controllers are co-operating fully with the government, making no trouble; not trying to chisel on prices. But if they did, the government would compel them to obey. It is voluntary control, cheerfully accepted, but could be made compulsory control at any moment.

EVERYTHING

FINALLY, THE GOVERNMENT, by its national mobilization act, has taken the right to control everything, our lives, property and money. Under this legislation it can do virtually anything but send a man to fight overseas. Parliament passed it almost unanimously. The nation wanted it.

Up to now it has not been much used. Only two munitions plants have been taken over by the government. But should any industry quarrel with the government in the business of war supplies, it would be disciplined instantly and, if necessary, taken over and nationalized.

Mr. Howe, the blunt tough-fibred minister of supply, was very frank about all this in the House. He said blandly that he thought he had assumed every possible power to get war materials moving, but if there were any more powers available he would take them also. And Mr. Howe, an individualist of individuals, who made his fortune in the struggles of private business competition, is the last man who wants the government interfering with anybody. But this is war, and it is a war to save the very system we have temporarily shelved.

That is the point. If the war were lost, if the Hitler system were to win out, there would never be any chance of liquidating the awesome thing we have built up in Ottawa. We would be forced to conduct our foreign trade on the Hitler basis of barter and that would compel us to control everything inside our country as well.

UNDER THE BEST of circumstances it is going to be difficult to cut away the thick growth of bureaucracy now in full bloom here in Ottawa. A good peace; a restoration of world trade would give us a sudden lift, might put to work thousands of men who, by that time, will be engaged in war industries. But failing a sudden freeing of trade, the state will have to maintain these people one way or another and the unemployment problem of the past will be small in comparison. And that, of course, means continuing most of the state controls we are setting up now.

These controls will go much farther before the war is over if it lasts long. You have seen the beginning of them here in the swarming capital of Ottawa where it is almost impossible to get a house, where offices are crowded and temporary government buildings are springing up, where we already have an organization utterly dwarfing the machinery of the last war when we

U.S. Opinion Alarmed Over Nazi Threat

In case Germany should ever win the war, which of these statements do you believe would be true, which false? Americans were asked.

Fortune Magazine's survey for the July issue reveals the most Americans are fearful of what would happen to Europe, the Americas and the world in the event of a German victory in the European war. Results are shown on the chart above.

STALIN STEALS THE SHOW

REPEATEDLY during the past few weeks I have expressed the opinion that Stalin would never passively permit Hitler to conquer all western Europe this summer; but that he would rather throw a monkey wrench into the machinery at the right time to help prevent any such end. He has effectively done so by his bloodless victory over Rumania.

Stalin's move on June 28 is among the most important of all events in this war. It does several things. It ends Hitler's dream of being able to finish one thing at a time. The basic Nazi strategy has been to use all German force on whatever victim was next in line for conquest. At all costs Hitler was determined not to fight a war in the east and the west at one and the same time. In his book Mein Kampf he makes clear that that is his central indictment of Germany's leaders in the last war. He argues that if Germany must fight Britain in the west she must have at least the neutrality of Russia to protect her rear; and that if she fights Russia she must have at least the neutrality of Britain for the same purpose—and that what ever happens she must never attempt to fight Russia and Britain at one and the same time.

Stalin has not yet violated the letter of his 1939 treaty with Hitler. It is even probable that the informed German of his precise intention to do what he did. But no one can convince me that Hitler is pleased at the Stalin move. It sets a match to the whole Balkan powder magazine. It forces Hitler to dispatch at enlisted 500,000 soldiers. You have seen the beginning of it here, and how it costs more to fight one year of this war than all the last war. But you haven't seen the end.

UNPREDICTABLE

WHAT THE END will be this reporter doesn't know. But you had better watch what is happening in the United States, the developing-hemispheric economy, the attempt to make North and South America self-contained. Economically Canada fits into this scheme and must if the war lasts long. That can mean only one thing—more government, more control. There remains only one hope of avoiding this thing, only one hope of restoring the world we used to know. That is victory and a lowering of tariffs. Victory is hard, but lowering of tariffs after war have attempted something like self-contained economy, is harder still. We are curious creatures, eager to give everything in wartime, grudging every dollar in peacetime, least part of his army to the southeast, as he has already had to do toward the Russian border with East Prussia. For neither Hitler nor Stalin is under any illusion as to the moral or motives which made the other sign the treaty of last August.

Stalin is now in a position to cut off the entire remaining oil supply of Hitler and Mussolini. In this connection it is well to remember that Hitler's vast conquests to date have not improved his basic position in regard to the supply of oil—perhaps the most vital of all his needs for fighting a long war. In all countries overrun, or sold out by traitors, the Nazis have seized large supplies of gasoline, and other petroleum products. But in no country, save Poland, has either Hitler or Mussolini got physical possession of actual oil-producing properties. Indeed his very conquests have made his long-range position much worse. For the British navy can now blockade the whole of continental Europe, except that part either actually controlled or within easy striking distance of the Red army.

PAASIKIVI, who represented Finland in her negotiations with Russia, said in one way he could not help liking tough old gangster Stalin, and that was because Stalin so enjoyed his own queer brand of elephantine jokes. I can imagine old Joe roaring with laughter when he picked June 28 as the day to blow up the status quo in the Balkans. For it was no secret that on June 28 Adolf Hitler had planned to burn up the Versailles Treaty, in a spectacular stunt staged in the Versailles palace, on the exact 21st anniversary of the signing of that document. Unless I have Adolf all wrong he will mark down that upset in his little book about his recent associate in the Kremlin.

But we in the western world could make no worse mistake than to mistake the immediate motives or ultimate intentions of the "Soviet." If Stalin does anything to embarrass or harass Hitler, it is certainly not to save us, or help us, except in so far as the temporary helping of us may help Russia and the Communists to safeguard and further the interests of the Marxist world revolution.

If England goes down this summer Hitler will have no further worries about oil, because there will be no subsequent blockade of the ocean lanes whence oil comes. He will have no further worries about Stalin, for Stalin will be forced to become a virtual pro-consul of the new Nazi empire, or else face a totalitarian war in which he would have not a snowball's

PRESENTATIONS

How to Use Logans

A committee of Victoria women interested in helping the Saanich growers dispose of their loganberries have submitted the following recipes prepared by Mrs. Foulds of the B.C. Electric Home Service. In making use of these suggestions, Victoria housewives can help the local growers dispose of their fruit.

Loganberry Sponge

Half pint whipping cream, almonds, three layers sponge cake. Boiled custard with one cup of milk, one egg, sugar to taste; boil until thick; cool.

Cut the centre from two of the layers, place these over first layer and arrange on a dish; pour over these layers some loganberry cream and toffee; whip the cream and add it to the cold custard, keeping back a little for decorating; add about half a cup of the spongecake crumbs and half a cup of loganberry puree. Mix all together and fill centre of cake; decorate with some of the cream and almonds.

Loganberry Puree—Three cups of loganberries, one and one-half cups of sugar, boil for about 10 minutes; strain, cool and use.

Send Woolies Off To Minesweepers

The Victoria depot of the Royal Naval War Comforts Committee, recently sent a packing case of over 100 pounds of woolies to the London headquarters of the Missions to Seamen. Previous to this, parcels of about eight pounds have been sent at a high rate of postage. The C.P.R. have kindly arranged to forward this case of comforts for minesweepers free of cost to London to the above society of which the Earl of Atholpe is president.

The case contained a total of 660 articles, comprising wristlets, mitts, gloves, socks, seaboot stockings, half mitts, rifle mitts, scarfs, helmets, caps and sleeveless sweaters.

The crews of minesweepers and those of ships of H.M. merchant navy come to the Institutes of the Missions to Seamen wet through or after having lost their ship and kit by mine or torpedo, and require a complete outfit. The chaplains report that the demand is insatiable and the society deals with these comforts by the lorry load. In the monthly magazine of the above society are many accounts of the issue and the appreciation of the issues to crews of these woolies.

A second case is being filled with the articles made up in bundles of 10, and will be sent off as soon as completed. Several letters of thanks have been received by Major F. V. Longstaff from the headquarters of the Missions to Seamen in London.

NAZI BUBBLE
TELLING OF PARIS

The occupation of Paris, to hear the Germans tell it, is really a lovely thing; just what the Parisians needed.

A broadcast describing a German parade up the Champs Elysees fairly bubbled with happy superlatives. The broadcast, in German, was picked up by the Columbia Broadcasting Systems listening station.

A German announcer who seemed to have great difficulty in restraining his enthusiasm gave a heel-by-heel description of the scene as Hitler's young men goosestepped briskly through the streets.

"ELEGANT, STYLISH"
"The parade is full of splendor," he said. "Now it passes the Arc de Triomphe—the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. . . . The cavalry, fiery, elegant, stylish. . . . How sturdy the soldiers are! They show Parisians, watching from both sides of the streets, how German soldiers can march even after having risked their lives hour by hour, day by day. . . . The infantry, 12 abreast, approaches. How the boots which have marched through France from victory to victory, once again are thrown up high in a fiery march! How the eyes of the men shine!"

So shouted the German announcer, reporting the occupation of the city on the Seine. He told of a German general standing under the Arc de Triomphe and passing out iron crosses to the German heroes. The announcer at one point during the broadcast moved the microphone so that it picked up a bit of dialogue between an iron-crossed soldier and the general.

"Have you shot into the enemy?" the general inquired.

"Yes, Herr General," was the proud reply, to which the general commented with evident satisfaction: "I am glad to hear that."

SIEG HEIL!
The general spoke of Hitler as "Our Leader, supreme commander of the army, the fulfiller of German history," whereupon the soldiers shouted: "Sieg Heil!"

The announcer, with true Teutonic sense of drama, ended the broadcast by going to the top of the Arc de Triomphe, from where, he said, "wherever you look you can see German plumes."

Another German broadcast picked up by CBS purported to be "Excerpts from a Radio Commentator's Diary," and spoke with relish of German soldiers in Paris who "smile jovially to pretty girls." The girls, the commentator added, "smile back and whisper: 'Le Fritz is tres charming!'"

Measure Junior's Growth Daily Times

TODAY A CHILD'S growth is reckoned in more ways than inches added on to height. Those marks on the nursery wall, showing how much taller Junior is today than he was a year ago, tell only part of the story of Junior's growth.

The year should have made him physically stronger, should have increased his muscle control, should have bettered his posture. All of these kinds of growth are encouraged by the right play facilities.

HE SHOULD BE MORE SELF-RELIANT

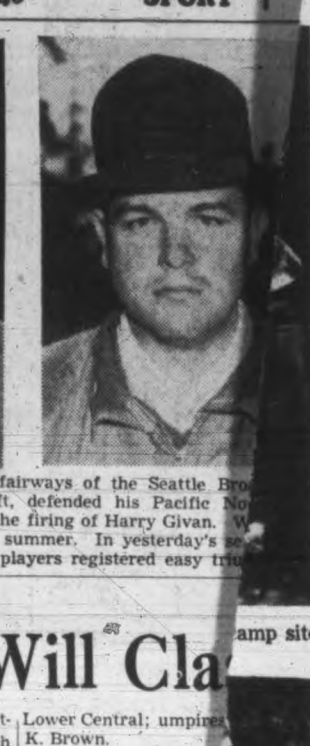

He should have gained in self-reliance. This happens naturally if parents are willing to let a child attempt the tasks they know are easy and enjoyable to do for him.

He should have become a more sociable person, knowing better than he did a year ago how to get on with other children, how to share and how to co-operate.

He should have become better friends with his Dad. The things they do together all tend to build a confidential relationship between the two that last through life.

He should rebel less against such dictates as "It's your bedtime now" than he did a year ago. He will if his parents have been calm, firm, and understanding in their treatment of him.

His Idea Must Grow With Body

Let children walk barefoot as much as possible. This "walking board" is fun for the youngsters. Slanted blocks throw weight on outer edges of feet, forcing them in proper walking positions.

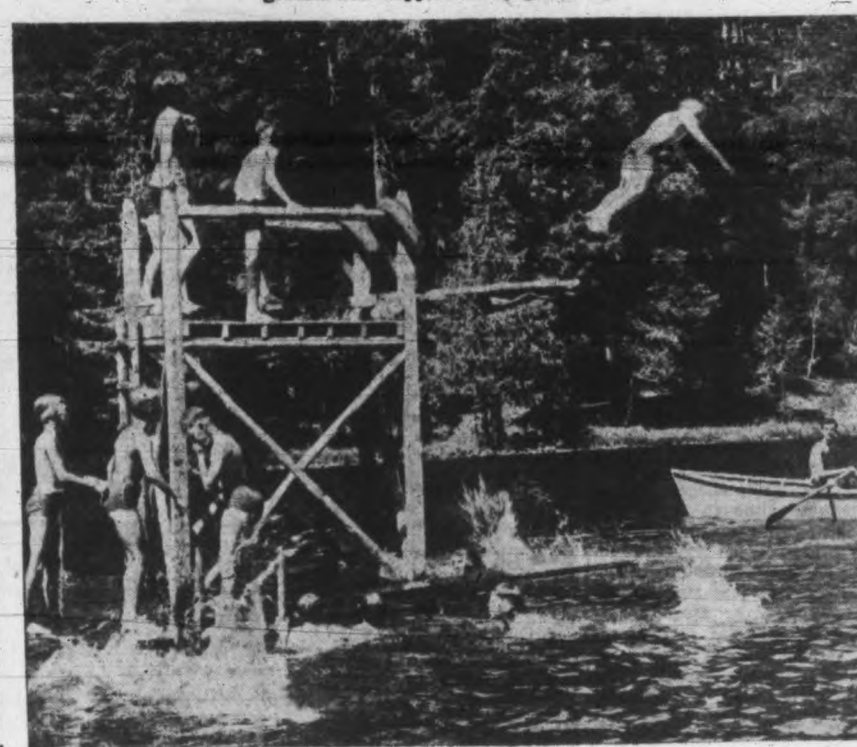

This three-year-old is having fun on the flying ring, but she's also strengthening muscles of her abdomen and back.

Over the fairways of the Seattle Brook Westland, left, defended his Pacific Northwest championship against the firing of Harry Givan, Walker Cup players registered easy triumph.

True at 'Y' Camp

Camp site. Boys, age 10 to 18, play volleyball, softball, on one of two courts. Disused waterwell in background now supplanted by gas pump.

A "cannon ball" off the top board at Glinz Lake, 15-acre camp ground. Supervisor watches.

"HANDLE PARTNERS WITH CARE," URGES MASTERS' CHAMPION

as a partner—once and as an opponent twice. To win this event, therefore, it is necessary to be able to handle different partners. Morris Ellis, winner this year, explains that with a partner with whom you play regularly, you bid differently and make certain plays that cannot be made with strange partners. In other words, you should not put a strange partner on the spot.

When Ellis' opening lead of the queen of spades held the first trick, he knew that his partner held the ace. In case East also held the ace, Ellis would have liked to continue a low spade; his partner would win with the ten and return a club.

But believing that would put too much strain on a new partnership, Ellis, hoping that East had the diamond suit stopped, played the jack of clubs. Declarer won with the queen, picked

With this hand he was interested only in finding out if the heart suit was stopped in East's hand, and the risk of the jump to three no trump was not as great as that of a possible pass of two clubs.

Knowledge Lacking For Job-hunters

WHETHER they have just put high school or college behind them, most young people are turned loose to hunt for jobs without having received a single tip on job-hunting.

Employers complain that the young people who come to them asking for work "don't know anything about anything," despite the impressive school records they have to back them up.

And it's no wonder they look so dumb to an employer. All he can possibly judge them by is the way they go about getting a job—a thing they are tackling "cold."

Most students don't go to school longer than the law requires because they want education for education's sake, even though educators like to suppose they do.

They stick it out and their parents foot the bills as long as they are able to, because they want to have the best possible qualifications for a job.

Why, then, doesn't every high school and college in the country offer a course—and see that all seniors enroll for it—called "How to Get a Job," or something else just as down to earth?

EMPLOYERS COULD SPEAK

The course could, at least, teach young people where to look for jobs in their fields, how to behave during an interview, how to write a letter of application with their own qualifications in mind, and what things—such as the appeal, "If you'll just give me a chance I'll do anything"—get an applicant nowhere with an employer.

It wouldn't be a bad idea for the school to ask a few different executives to come to class and let the young and ambitious ask for a job and meet some of the usual remarks and questions.

Schools ought to wake up and do something about next year's graduates.

Tell of Troth at 'Good News' Luncheon

Creamed fish or chicken with canned button mushrooms.

BY MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

SURPRISE YOUR friends with a "good news luncheon." Ask them to bridge and when the menu is well along, tell them you are going to be married.

Keep the luncheon charming, lovely to look at and delicious. Serve it at the card tables. Have tiny envelopes passed, containing the announcement, or else have a batch of telegrams delivered during the party.

For the main course, serve cubes of chicken and canned button mushrooms, or chicken a la king. Here's an appropriate menu:

Announcement Luncheon

Strawberry and honeydew cocktail, chicken a la king in heart-shaped patty shells, or chicken and mushrooms in scallops, platter of fresh asparagus and baked whole tomato, pickled peaches, hot rolls, jellied avocado and lime salad, toasted Parmesan crackers, mold of vanilla ice cream with raspberry ice centre, twin heart cakes, coffee.

Jellied-Avocado and Lime Salad

One package lime-flavored gelatin, 1 pint hot water, 1 tablespoon vinegar, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1 medium avocado, and 1/2 teaspoon scraped onion.

Dissolve gelatin in hot water; add vinegar and salt. Pour thin layer of gelatin into individual molds, and chill until firm. Chill remaining gelatin until cold and syrupy.

Place in bowl of cracked ice or ice water and whip with rotary egg beater until fluffy and thick, like whipped cream. Peel avocado, remove seed, and force pulp through coarse sieve or potato ricer. Measure 1/2 cup. Add with onion to whipped gelatin and beat until blended. Turn out on firm gelatin in molds. Chill until firm. Unmold on crisp lettuce and garnish with watercress. Serve with mayonnaise or French dressing. Serves 4 to 6.

Strawberry and Honeydew Cocktail

One box (1 pound) fresh or quick-frozen sliced strawberries, thawed, 4 teaspoons lemon juice, 2 1/2 cups honeydew melon, cut in 1-inch balls, 6 sprigs of mint.

Combine the strawberries and lemon juice. Place 3 melon balls in each sherbet glass; fill with strawberries. Arrange 5 melon balls around edge of each glass. Garnish with mint. Serves 5.

Furniture Finishes

Ordinarily two or three waxings a year are sufficient to keep furniture surfaces elastic and protected. Surfaces that are subjected to a great deal of wear require several more. Have it waxed clean—it may be washed with lukewarm water and a bit of soap and dried with a soft cloth—but work quickly—before applying the wax. Several thin coats, each rubbed down to a hard gloss, finish, are much more effective than one thick coat of wax.

Modern Simplicity

Modern furniture, carefully chosen and arranged and with appropriate simple accessories, gives a room a feeling of restfulness, of space and freshness. An attractive bedroom in the modern manner is furnished in blond oak.

The rug is plain blue, a medium, soft shade, with a textured pattern. The straight, pushed-back hangings at the wide window are of a darker blue; the upholstery is of the same blue as the rug combined with dusty rose accents.

Stories are white and rose.

MAKING
FARMER
Maxim "Make hay while the sun shines" is fast losing its universal application in connection with the process of converting grass and legume crops into feed for livestock. The relatively newer method of ensiling these crops enables the grower to produce a good quality of feed under adverse weather conditions which might render hay making impossible.

This does not mean that rainy weather is more suitable than fine weather for making silage, but since it takes several days to make grasses and legumes into hay, while they can be ensiled immediately as cut, the chance of weather damage is practically eliminated by the latter method.

For 16 years experiments with regard to various methods of ensiling some 20 different crops have been conducted. Red clover or alfalfa cut when in full bloom, sweet clover in the bud stage, and timothy, oats or barley cut just after heading, have all been made into excellent silage. The moisture content of the crop is extremely important in making silage. If it is too wet there is danger of rotting and if too dry moulding may take place. Normally, a moisture content of 70 per cent is nearly ideal and cutting at the stages mentioned above will give approximately the correct amount of moisture, providing there is not too much added by the outside influence of dew or rain.

As further insurance against possible spoilage in the silo, the addition of molasses to grasses and legumes for silage is recommended. Molasses provides the necessary carbohydrates upon which bacteria may feed to produce lactic acid, which in turn preserves the silage. These materials, although relatively high in corn are comparatively low in grasses and legumes and their addition artificially to the latter crop is therefore recommended. Approximately 50 pounds of molasses per ton of crop ensiled should give good results. The more adverse the weather conditions, the greater the need for adding molasses.

Grasses and legumes properly handled as silage will provide highly nutritious feed with comparatively little loss and at relatively low cost. In contrast to hay-making, ensiling is not so dependent on the whims of the weather man.

Canadian Poultry Goes to Tropics

For many years Canadian Record of Performance (R.O.P.) poultry have been known in several countries for their high quality.

Consignments have been sent to different parts of the world and recently additional sales have been made to British Guiana and Trinidad in the West Indies.

In November, 1939, four pens of barred rocks were supplied to the director of Georgetown, British Guiana, two of the pens having been sent by a breeder of St. Therese, in the Province of Quebec.

Their production records in Georgetown for the five months from December, 1939 to April, 1940, have just been received in Canada and show the average number of eggs laid per bird was 114, or 75 per cent production. The letter accompanying the report states "egg size is quite good and the birds are laying well, despite the very hot and dry weather."

The shipment of R.O.P. stock to Trinidad, British West Indies, has created such a good impression that negotiations are now proceeding for the export of 200 pedigreed R.O.P. pullets to that colony. Recently an inquiry for Canadian R.O.P. stock was received by the Poultry Division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture at Ottawa from the Orange Free State, South Africa.

You can have hardy chrysanthemums in the open ground this fall if you start early flowering seed now. They give fine late fall cutting material.

By J.K.N.
One of western Canada's leading goat breeders of the future is Miss Rosamund Smart, Glanford Avenue, who, in recent years, has gone to the fore in the industry on Vancouver Island and has shipped purebred stock to many places in eastern Canada, and, this week, to South America.

This amazing young person (she is only 19) looks after her stock of between 45 and 50 goats by herself. How does she do it? Well, first of all she is out in her barn these summer mornings by 4.30 and she stays there and in the fields until dusk, when she can work no longer.

She has great plans for the future. Some day she hopes to own a large farm, with several hundred goats, and to have a business with hemisphere-wide ramifications. With plenty of hard work and lots of study she believes this can be successfully done.

Miss Smart was only an infant when she arrived in Victoria with her parents from England. The family James Bay and her bought two goats for milking offered to look after "That's fine by me," said father, and from that start the Rosamund Smart has developed to its present proportions. Her sleek white goats are the prizes at shows Vancouver.

South America, and given five a

Give the big-fruited peppers plenty of room. Expert growers allow them two and a half feet in the row. Give them plenty of water. They are hot and thirsty.

Mustard will grow in any soil. Sow a row of it for greens. It will be a welcome change from spinach and beets.

In transplanting any of the onion tribe, snip off half the leaves.

It is not too late to set out tomatoes, peppers and eggplants.

Keep out of the bean patch when it is wet if you don't want rust.

Save a few gladiolus bulbs those that have the shortest sprouts, for early June planting.

Most plant experts consider manure more harmful than good for lawns. Large quantities of noxious weed seeds are broadcast in this way, and the lawn is an-unsightly mess for months after the first application. Use a complete plant food instead.

Make succession sowings of beets, lettuce, beans and radishes.

Scatter grass seed on thin spots whenever it looks rainy.

Don't relax in the campaign against bugs.

Don't cut the asparagus too late if you expect an equally good crop next year. Give it a dress of plant food when you stop cutting.

Follow the farmer's practice of rotating crops in the vegetable patch.

Four-headed Turkey

MEANOOK, Alta. (CP)—A turkey with four heads died in its shell at the farm of Mrs. L. Kreiser but it was believed it would have hatched had not the turkey hen left the nest before hatching, chilling all the eggs and killing all the young in the shell. The freak bird had three eyes and two beaks.

Farm Notes

Poultry breeders have at Dominion experimental station, a handy ready reckoner in a tin. At the Central Experiment Farm, Ottawa, and other experimental farms throughout the Dominion, accurate cost accounts are kept upon all poultry operations, with the result that figures are available for incubation, brooding, rearing, egg production, and fattening costs under the varied conditions of the different parts of Canada.

There were 174 cheese factories in operation in Canada during February, 1940, compared with 137 in February, 1939. Winter production of cheese as a whole is comparatively small, but an advance of 1,000,000 pounds, or per cent, was recorded in the month of February, 1940, compared with the period of 1939. The production for the winter months (December-February) in 1939-40 was 849,000 pounds and 4,712 pounds in 1938-39.

Concentrated whole milk sales in Canada advanced to 15,333,000 pounds in the December-February, 1938-39, period, over 24,000,000 pounds in the corresponding period of 1939-40.

FOR STARS IN ORDER OF BRIGHTNESS

The figure of the Elder Race. They were not a gradual aggregation of constellations admitted somewhat haphazardly to the number. At present, we know no more about the Elder Race than that they lived in Europe, in latitude between 37 and 38 degrees north—that is, in the Mediterranean region. The epoch was very close to 2500 B.C., between 300 and 2800 B.C.

According to Mrs. Maunder, they had considerable knowledge of astronomy, and recognized a calendar based on the sun and moon, which had at least 12 months. Occasionally, as with other early calendars, a thirteenth month was added to keep the reckoning straight, just as we have an extra day every leap year. Thus they must have recognized the part of the sky in which the sun moves through the year, the zodiac, and so divided it into 12 constellations, one for each month. It happened that there were four bright stars near the place where the sun was at the beginning of each season.

"ROYAL STARS"
These four, on this account, have since been known as the "royal stars," and they are: Regulus, Antares, Fomalhaut and Aldebaran. Only the second is visible these July evenings. Antares marked the sun's position at the beginning of autumn. To the right of the scorpion is a group which they called "the claws of the scorpion," regarding it, however, as a separate constellation. There is a very slow wobbling of the earth's axis, by which the constellations seem to slip once around the zodiac every 26,000 years. One result of this, incidentally, is that in the year 15000, the scorpion will appear high in the winter evening sky, and Orion low in the summer. This change meant that, around 700 B.C., the sun was not in the scorpion at the beginning of autumn, but in the neighboring "claws of the scorpion."

It was then, suggests Mrs. Maunder, that this constellation was given its present name, Libra, the scales. The reason is rather obvious, because at this time of year day and night are equal in length. But they still kept on calling the two principal stars in the figure "the northern claw" and "the southern claw." These names survive in those which the stars bear today. They are Arabic, "Zuben Eschamali" and "Zuben Elgenubi." The first part, "zuben," means claw, while "eschamali" and "elgenubi" means northern and southern, respectively.

Thus, in the stars we see overhead in the evening, we have the world's oldest picture book, where men have preserved the old stories, and also have recorded the knowledge of ages now past and forgotten.

Doctors and dentists may find it useful for quickly sterilizing instruments.

Molten Metal Rods

LATEST TO JOIN the increasing number of technologic processes to be performed continuously, instead of intermittently, is the casting of rods and tubes from molten metal.

After a relatively long period of development, continuous casting is applicable in principle to all metals and alloys, although most of the work has thus far been done on copper.

The equipment and process themselves are fundamentally simple, as described by an industrial bulletin issued by Arthur D. Little Inc. The molten metal flows from a reservoir out of a water-cooled tube at the bottom.

As the metal flows down the tube it solidifies into a rod, which is cooled by an accurately adjusted spray as it is continuously withdrawn. Exact control over all these operations is necessary for successful operation. The flowing metal always solidifies at the same point of the exit tube, and each part of the rod is formed under the same conditions.

NO SEGREGATION
Higher quality of product is promised by the new process. There is no chance for components of alloys to segregate out, air and other gases in the molten metal are not trapped in the solid metal, producing flaws, and the crystals into which the solidifying metal forms are large.

Due to high quality, the use of continuously-cast rods, instead of the usual ingots, is foreseen as the raw material from which wire is drawn.

Model airplane builders are no longer dependent upon Japan for the thin paper they use to cover the wings of their work. An American paper is now on the market with what are claimed to be physical characteristics superior to the imported material. There are five colors and two weights. "We know that some Southwest Indians buried near the refuse heap of a settlement, or in it. We know that Basket Maker Indians in the southwest at one time buried in small pits close to the house. In the Mimbres Valley of

New Mexico, Indians used to bury under house floors. Other groups of aborigines practiced cremation. But Folsom customs can only be guessed.

"If Folsom hunters buried their dead, we should find a burial, some time. Then, of course, we would know how to hunt for more burials. In that way, we could show what these early inhabitants looked like, and perhaps learn something about their diseases and their ancestry."

PROBABLY CASUAL ABOUT THE DEAD
Actually, Folsom hunters in early North America were probably rather casual about the dead, Dr. Roberts suspects. It is not unlikely that they did as their ancestors did, back in Siberia—simply leaving the dead exposed to the weather, wild animals, and time. If that was the case, archaeologists would like to find it out. Then, they could give up hunting for those long-sought graves, and leave Folsom Man's discovery to sheer chance.

Ironically enough, some museum in Canada or the United States may now possess the treasure of a Folsom skull. But until the type is recognized beyond doubt, there is no way of being sure about this.

Folsom Man will turn up, Dr. Roberts confidently believes. "When Folsom Man is found," he said, "I think he will prove to be not very different from familiar types of Indian."

WHAT MADE Bob Bowman look bad in the beating of Joe Medwick was his alleged threat to do that very thing, but it is hard to believe any baseball pitcher would throw at a batter's head meaning to hit it. Manager Larry MacPhail went a little far in saying Bowman was planning to hit Medwick on the head, MacPhail or nobody else has any way of knowing what was in Bowman's mind. And any pitcher or ball player will tell you it is virtually impossible for a pitcher to hit a batter who expects to be hit . . . anywhere, especially on the head.

The bean ball victim loses track of the ball, or else the ball sails, as in the instance of Mickey Cochrane.

A number of great hitters have found it utterly impossible to get out of the path of a pitched ball. Ray Chapman made no move to get away from the pitch the afternoon he was killed by a ball thrown by Carl Mays.

The more intelligent pitchers point to a zone which hurlers may use with comparative safety in loosening up hitters. It gives batters time to get out of the way.

The duster is not always employed to frighten a batter, or push a plate-crowder back.

It sometimes is used to get a right-hand hitter out of the way so the catcher can better whip the ball to third base when a base-runner is getting away. Similarly, when a runner on first is threatening to steal with a left-hand batter up.

Pitchers frequently throw behind a batter, or high and inside, to break up a squeeze play.

If a pitcher had perfect control, he wouldn't hit a batter on the head even if it was his aim to scare him. He could accomplish that purpose by making it too close for comfort.

While pitchers who throw at hitters should be kicked out of baseball, we doubt that a pitcher ever threw at one with the deliberate intention of hitting him. Batters will continue to be struck by pitched balls as long as they say "the pitcher was just wild enough to be effective."

The wonder is that more batters aren't hit.

Australia is likely to have its greatest boxing boom for years this season, despite the war. Tommy Burns, the former world heavyweight champion is expected there soon as manager to three well-known Canadian boxers in Eddie Weinstock, the cover boy heavyweight, Sammy Jenkins, middleweight, and Eddie Ryan, featherweight.

Burns figured in the most important boxing contest ever held in Australia, when he lost his world's title to Jack Johnson at Sydney on December 26, 1908.

As there are already several first class overseas boxers in Australia including Attilio Sabatino and Archie Moore, a busy time lies ahead for Ron Richards, the Australian triple champion, Fred Henneberry and other local fighters.

Incidentally, Richards has already felt the full force of Moore's armor. Moore, a comparatively unknown colored American, gave Richards one of the worst trouncings of his career at Sydney. The referee stopped the fight at the end of the 10th round, after Richards had been severely punished. Moore was floored for a count of six at the beginning of the first round.

Gasmen Score Baseball Win

Pitzer and Nex basebatters are tied with Navy for the second position in the Rithet Cup standings.

It all happened last night at Athletic Park when gasmen took advantage of seven errors by the sailors to win the ball game 9 to 5. Tillamook Athletics lead the race with four wins and two defeats. The tied second-place teams have each won three and lost three. Eagles hold down the bottom spot with two wins and four defeats.

Navy will have the opportunity to tie up the top position when they play Athletics at the enclosure Wednesday.

It was the fourth and seven innings in last night's fixture which brought about Navy's downfall. Pitzer and Nex scored eight of their nine runs in these two frames when Navy had trouble holding the sphere.

Gasmen got their ninth run in the eighth inning. Sailors' runs came in the third, seventh and ninth innings.

Ray Maitland, pitching for gasmen, had trouble with his control all evening, walking eight batters. He allowed six hits, one of which was a circuit drive by Pitzer in the last inning with one man on base.

Pitzer and Nex got 10 hits from the offerings of Bunny Southon.

Scoville will be at the wheel of No. 19, a fast car that has won many honors from Portland to Los Angeles. It will be his first appearance at the local track, and followers of the sport are promised an interesting time.

Other United States drivers to be seen in action include Lou McMurry of Seattle in No. 6, Seth Henning of Portland in No. 5, Claude Walling of Portland in No. 9 and Bill Scott of Seattle in No. 62.

Local pilots report their machines in good shape for the meet which will start at 7:45 with time trials.

Softball Schedule

Leaders Will Clash

Highlight of next week's softball schedule will be the clash Tuesday night at the Athletic Park between Longshoremen, presettlers in the A section race, and Cameron Lumber, second place club.

So far this season the freight handlers have held the Indian sign on the lumbermen. There is keen rivalry between the squads, and Tuesday's battle should produce smart softball.

Captains and team managers are asked to get their entries in for the following knockout competitions: A and B sections, Calvert and Poodle Dog Cups only; D section, Calvert, Poodle Dog and Peden Cups. Entries close July 6.

In a B section game last night Bull Bros. defeated the 2nd A.A. Battery 24 to 6. Spencers won from the Times 8 to 5 in a C section tussle. Unity were winners over Spencer's Cardinals 12 to 11 in a women's game.

Baer, Galento Ready for Bout

NEW YORK (AP)—Max Baer and Tony Galento, those two striking examples of simple life, or maybe it should be simple examples of the striking life, meet next Tuesday in Jersey City, and what they have in the way of qualifications for their profession is more than offset by what they don't have.

To begin with, the affair is billed as a boxing contest. In the cases of both Max and Tony any resemblance of their performance to boxing is coincidental and without malice aforethought.

Tony doesn't have a right hand. Max doesn't have a left hand. Both have offset these deficiencies by developing a backhand.

Neither is an up-and-coming youngster nearing his peak. Max reached his some years ago, and Tony just went up and down a toothill. He's probably no better or no worse than he was on his best day.

Galento, despite the handicap of a balloon chassis, can hit with his left like nobody's business, and he has the heart of a tiger.

Baer outwardly still is a superb specimen physically. He can hit with his right, but on occasions he has shown no heart for his work.

It has been 19 years since a National Leaguer has led both majors in home runs, but big Johnny Mize of the St. Louis Cardinals has started as though he intended to break the spell.

Score Easy Victories In Semis

SEATTLE (AP)—Two former United States Walker Cup players — Jack Westland, defending champion from Everett, Wash., and Harry Givan, Seattle — were set for the 36-hole finals today of the Pacific Northwest men's amateur golf championship. Muriel Veatch, Longview, the Washington State champ, was to meet Mrs. Mary Moezel Wagner, Portland.

Mrs. Wagner yesterday eliminated the defending titleist, Marian McDougall, Portland, Ore., 2 and 1. Miss Veatch defeated Nancy Hurst, Portland, on the 19th hole.

Givan trounced Ernie Tindall, Seattle, 7 and 6, while Westland beat Bob Tindall, another Seattle youth, 8 and 7 in yesterday's semifinals.

Givan shot a three-under-par 67 on the first 18 to make the 36 in 4 up. He carded a par 36 in the afternoon to go 6 up. Then he won the 28th, lost the 29th and closed it out on the 30th.

Jonson three-putted thrice and hit one out of bounds on the first 18, and was unable to do much better in the afternoon.

The Westland-Tindall match was close in the morning, although defending champion Westland was seldom in danger. He was 2 up at the end of nine, and that saved him for the same margin at the halfway mark, as both went one under par for 32's on the second nine.

Westland's 35 on the third nine of the day—one under par—was four strokes better than Tindall could do, and Jack hit the 27th mark 6 up. It was just a matter of time then, and Westland made it as brief as possible by taking the 28th and 29th.

Burrards Register Win Over Indians

VANCOUVER (CP)—Vancouver Burrards handed North Shore Indians the season's record whipping in an Intercity Box Lacrosse League game here last night, registering a 26 to 8 victory.

The win was chalked up after a fight between Indians' goalie, Burrard Hill, and Roy Cavallin of Burrards which ended when Hill was given a five-minute penalty, Cavallin 10 minutes and Van Emery, another Indian, duration of the game.

The game did not change standings and Burrards remain in third spot with Indians fourth.

Victoria's Animal Pets Get Fine New Hospital

A PROUD ACHIEVEMENT

We take pride in listing the Small Animal Hospital among the many structures we have built in contributing to the development of Victoria and this community generally.

MODERN DESIGN—The new Small Animal Hospital, 979 Pandora Avenue, is designed along modernistic lines. Victoria lovers of animal pets need have no fears when they entrust "Fido" or "Kitty" to the scientific methods of veterinary surgery and therapy employed at this institution.

Modern Science Aids Ailing

Modern X-ray and fluoroscopic equipment, maternity and isolation wards, and even sun-bath areas, are at the command of the Victoria lover of animal pets with the opening of the Small Animal Hospital at 979 Pandora Avenue.

This new institution is under the direction of Dr. M. L. Olsen, who studied veterinary surgery at Colorado State College, and has practiced both at Duncan and at Victoria. Before planning his new animal hospital, Dr. Olsen carried on his work in aid of animal pets at 928 Johnson Street.

The Small Animal Hospital is unique in Victoria. It is a handsomely-designed structure in the modern manner, immaculately clean, so that no contagious disease may menace the pets entrusted to the care of the doctor. Indeed, the hospital offers to suffering animals the same perfection of medical service the human being would expect.

Dr. Olsen stated yesterday that he would be glad to welcome visitors to the hospital at any time Wednesday, July 3.

The interior of the building has been finished in a white and cream enamel decorative scheme with terra cotta colored floors of linoleum. Off a handsomely appointed reception room opens the treatment room. Here ailing pets are examined with such modern devices as the otoscope for the examination of the ears. And here the doctor makes his preliminary diagnoses.

X-RAY
In an adjoining room is the most modern X-ray and fluoroscopic equipment available in Canada. Dr. Olsen pointed out to the Times today. With this modern equipment, he said, bone fractures become a relatively simple matter to treat.

UPLANDS GOLF.
Mary Young ended her round 4 up to lead "A" class in the par competition held yesterday at the Uplands Golf Club. In "B" division Mrs. W. Harker was the winner, finishing 3 up. Uplands women scored a 7 to 3 victory over Oak Bay in an inter-club match on the former course during the week.

WINNIPEG FLIER SCORES ON NAZIS

LONDON (CP)—A daring young Winnipegger piloted a Hudson aircraft attached to the coastal command which today attacked and blew up an ammunition store at Willemsoord Harbor in Holland, the Air Ministry announced.

The successful raid on the Netherlands port was one of a series of blows dealt by the hard-hitting Royal Air Force against the Nazis. Activities covered the coasts of Scandinavia and the Netherlands and interior points in Denmark and north Germany.

The Canadian, who holds the Distinguished Service Cross, approached the German-occupied Willemsoord harbor at a height of 13,000 feet while engaged on dawn patrol.

He shut off his engine, glided silently down, pulled out of a dive at 3,000 feet, "and the explosions of his bombs were the first thing the German ground defences knew of his presence," the Air Minister said in amplification of the official communique.

"As he circled the town after his attack he saw a big explosion in one of the ammunition stores he had wrecked and a large fire among the buildings on the docks," it was added.

For years, Chinese razors were made of old worn-out horseshoes from Hamburg, Germany. The Chinese believed that the hammering on the cobbled streets of Hamburg gave the razors a perfect temper, and they would not buy from any other city.

We all know what has happened to the price of NEW Cars — and it's equally certain that in a very short time the price of USED Cars must follow suit. The resolution, passed unanimously at a meeting recently, will be sent to heads of the Dominion and British Columbia governments. An address on "The Change in the Viewpoint of the American Public Towards the Present War" will be given by Professor Bernard Bierman, head of the faculty of political science at Seattle College, at Tuesday's meeting of the Kiwanis Club. Owing to the Dominion Day holiday there will be no luncheon meeting of the Gyro Club on Monday. Gerald A. $1,055,059 Spent On City Building Construction values in the city property during the first half of this year passed the million mark, figures released today by the building inspector's department, disclosed.

The total was well ahead of surrounding municipalities where home building continued at a high rate with Saanich setting the pace.

The city aggregate was better than two and one half times the total for the first six months of 1939, the comparative figures being $1,055,059 to date and $399,229 at June 30, 1939.

The current values represented 410 projects, a number just ahead of 1939's 402 at June 30. They included 120 houses of a total value of $335,910. Last year at the same date 53 dwellings had been built at a cost of $157,720.

During the month just closing only six new homes were started at a total cost of $20,500. Last year there were 18 worth $49,520. General activity also lagged, the aggregate for June covering 63 projects worth $65,020, against 73 worth $10,166 in the same month last year.

This year there have been three apartments built at a cost of $64,500 against one worth $20,000 during the first half of 1939.

SAANICH STILL BOOMING

The current year's boom on home building which has been evident monthly in Saanich, continued throughout June and figures for the half year were far above those of last year.

There were 214 permits issued for new homes, a total 346 taken out since January 1, the value of dwellings being $428,474. Total value of all permits was $459,692. Last year during the same period there were 250 permits issued with a total value of $312,685, of which 128 were for dwellings, valued at $274,810.

During the past month there were 53 permits issued, of which 33 were for dwellings, valued at $63,600. Gross value of all permits was $107,100.

R.A.F. Scores in East Africa

Italian Destroyer Sunk By British Warships

CAIRO (AP)—A naval communiqué today said:

"British naval forces operating in the central Mediterranean on the evening of June 28 sighted three enemy destroyers, which retired at high speed. In the ensuing chase one enemy destroyer was sunk. The other two escaped under cover of darkness."

There were no British casualties.

The Royal Air Force communiqué today said:

"Successful raids were carried out yesterday on petrol and bomb dumps in Macaca (Italian East Africa). Low-flying attacks with bombs and machine guns were made of petrol dumps. Five hours later the main dump was still burning and others had burned themselves out."

"It was believed the greater part of the petrol stock at the airbase was destroyed. Bomb dumps were similarly attacked, with very heavy explosions resulting."

"Military huts nearby were extensively damaged and left burning. All of our planes are safe."

PLANES BOMBED

"In the western desert an effective raid was made at El Gubbi. Bombs burst among the fuel and aircraft gathered around the refueling point. A large petrol fire was started, causing a column of smoke to rise 1,000 feet."

"Photographs subsequently revealed direct hits on aircraft, the tented camp and the refueling point. The enemy was taken by surprise. We suffered no casualties."

"An enemy fighter CR-42 and one Ghill aircraft were reported captured at Sidi Aziz after being damaged by fighters."

"Mersa Matruh was raided yesterday. A number of bombs were dropped with slight damage only. Our fighters engaged the enemy over Malta. One enemy bomber was reported shot down. A flying boat on reconnaissance located an enemy submarine and attacked it. The result is unknown."

With the Forces

Scottish Unit Nearly Complete

First Battalion, Canadian Scottish Regiment, "Vancouver Island's Own," will be at war strength before the end of next week, recruiting officers announced today as enlistments for the unit poured in from island and "sterior points."

The first battalion is the only infantry unit in this area now listed for overseas service and comparatively few platoons remain to be filled, officers said.

When completed the battalion will represent all parts of the island and several up-country towns, which have sent scores of men to the kitlies. Less than one-third are Victorians.

The result of the near-completion of the unit has been a last-minute rush by men who want to get into an overseas unit. Other units are listed for home defence. When the first battalion is filled recruiting will continue here for the second battalion, which is now in training.

All parts of Vancouver Island have responded well to the call for men, officers said. Port Alberni has sent an unusually strong contingent. At Campbell River it was reported the rush was so great it had to be discouraged or the mines would have had to shorten production.

The brass band of the Scottish was $71,470. Last June there were 59 permits issued with a value of $72,810, of which 30 were for dwellings, value at $66,903.

OAK BAY GAINS $114,143

Oak Bay building values for the first six months of this year were $114,143 more than the corresponding total last year.

This year 135 permits valued at $350,130 have been issued. Ninety-one of these were for homes valued at $329,600. Last year 86 permits valued at $235,987 were issued. Fifty of the 86 were for dwellings worth $208,300.

This month is slightly lower than June of last year. Twenty-one permits representing $48,355 have been issued, including 14 for homes worth $47,350. In June of 1939 21 permits were issued valued at $69,850. They included 16 for new homes valued at $69,100.

ESQUIMALT AHEAD

In Esquimalt the last six months showed an increase of $52,999 over the same period in 1939.

Forty-six permits, with a value of $90,625, have been issued since January. This compared with 30 permits valued at $37,626 for the first six months of last year.

Of the 46 permits issued this year, 27 were for new homes valued at $72,419. At June 30 last year, 15 were granted for new dwellings valued at $34,950.

During June nine permits valued at $18,225, were taken out. Six of these were for new homes worth $18,100. In June, 1939, six permits were valued at $4,425. Two of these were for homes costing $3,030.

Two permits were issued this week. W. T. Duncan took out a permit for a five-room cedar siding dwelling at 837 Old Esquimalt Road at a cost of $2,500. The other was issued to Payne and Lindsay for a $3,600 six-room frame stucco house at 1037 Wolaston Street.

2 R.C.A.F. MEN SERIOUSLY INJURED

ST. THOMAS (CP)—Flt-Sgt. Alfred Simpson of the Royal Canadian Air Force technical training school here, was detained by R.C.A.F. service police when it was learned he was owner of a car believed to have caused critical injuries to two airmen at Port Stanley, Ont., late yesterday.

He was turned over to provincial police, but no charges were laid, pending investigation. Police and Crown Attorney E. W. Haines said they were trying to discover whether Simpson was driver of the car which struck down Russell McQuarry, 24, of Biggar, Sask., and C. Norborough, 23, of Vancouver.

Doctors this afternoon said McQuarry's injuries might be fatal.

After being knocked unconscious by the hit-run car, McQuarry was run over by a second car, the driver of which failed to see the airmen on the road in time to stop. The second car dragged McQuarry about 30 feet. Norborough was knocked to one side of the road out of the paths of other cars.

Lumber Workers Give Part Wages to War

PORT ALBERNI, B.C. (CP)—A scheme whereby one per cent of every workers' Monday wage in this district would be deducted and contributed to Canada's war effort was endorsed by a group of representative citizens meeting here Friday night.

The scheme, originated by workers of Alberni Pacific Lumber Company, is being adopted by other mills in the district. It is estimated returns will be between $2,400 and $2,800 per month.

Appreciation

For Sale—"The Diamond Ring"

We call it "The Diamond Ring" because it was brought in by a veteran, who explained he wanted to give it as he could not give cash. This is typical of the deep-seated determination to help alleviate to some extent the terrible sufferings falling on the world. The Red Cross are doing our work (yours and mine) in the inferno over there. Perhaps you can spare some more things for us to sell.

Raiders Kill 29 Civilians

Channel Islanders Murdered by Nazis

LONDON (CP)—British anger against the Nazis rose today with the disclosure that 29 persons were killed in German air raids on the demilitarized Channel Islands off the coast of France.

The raids on Guernsey and Jersey yesterday came shortly after the government had announced the islands were demilitarized. A Home Office statement listed 23 persons killed and 36 injured on Guernsey and six killed and several injured on Jersey.

All the victims in the raids on Guernsey and Jersey were civilians, among the few remaining after the islands had been demilitarized and proclaimed as "open towns" and evacuated. The raiders machine-gunned the remaining residents of the peaceful islands—most before the war for their low income tax and as a holiday paradise—as they sought cover from the diving bombers.

TAKEN BY SURPRISE

The bombers approached Jersey at a high altitude and took residents by surprise in quick bombing and machine-gunning dives.

"Before the people got to shelter bombs were falling and machine gun bullets were streaming down into the street," one islander related. "German airmen were flying so low that there can be no doubt at all they were intent on the deliberate murder of civilians.

"Their bombs did a lot of damage and caused several fires. There was not a solitary gun on the island to hinder the attackers."

A Guernsey woman, who reported three bombers flew over that island, said: "From what I hear, the Germans were trying to destroy quantities of tomatoes and potatoes. I don't think they were very successful, but they did succeed in killing a large number of civilians."

SPECTACULAR MOVEMENT

A majority of the 90,000 population was transferred to England last week in an historic exodus. They left behind field crops, livestock and most of their belongings. Among them was Charles Fraser, who once farmed in Alberta. He operated a store in St. Peter, Guernsey.

Practically everything of food value which might be seized by German raiding parties had been removed before the evacuation. Herds of the famous Jersey and Guernsey cattle were shipped to England and virtually all of the remaining potato crop was lifted. The tomato crop was stripped.

Bela Lanan COURT REPORTER

Decision in the Strange Case of "THE BULLET THAT MISSED THE MARK"

"GUILTY!" But this judgment of the court was a mere matter of form. Cyrus Godfrey had really entered a plea of "guilty" at the very start. What he asked of the court was probation, a chance to escape the usual trip "up the river."

This startling case is known today as "mercy homicide," a subject that has undergone a world-wide discussion, both pro and con.

In disposing of Godfrey, the court said: "It is a certainty that most people would agree that 'carte blanche' justification of this type of homicide would be exceedingly dangerous to society."

And here are the court's final words: "With one so obsessed with the love of his own child that he himself would lay down his own life with his; it can scarcely be said that he was devoid of the sensibilities of life, or that he was possessed of genuine criminal instincts."

"The sentence of the court is that the defendant be committed to an institution for five years, but that the sentence be suspended and the defendant be placed on probation for that length of time."

It was a loss for "mercy homicide," but a win for the man, Cyrus Godfrey. This is taken from a true case. Reference of citation may be had by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to "Bela Lanan—Court Reporter."

East Asia Field for Japan States Arita

TOKYO (AP)—Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita warned the western powers today to make no move which might upset the status quo in east Asia or the south seas and emphasized that the future of these regions is "a matter of grave concern to Japan."

Arita, who delivered this warning in a broadcast to the empire, clearly enunciated an Oriental "Monroe Doctrine" in which he envisaged east Asia "uniting under a single sphere" with Japan as the "stabilizing force."

At the same time the foreign minister declared that Japan's conflict with China is a step toward building a new order in the east founded on a "just and permanent peace." He cautioned foreign nations to keep their hands off.

"We are determined," he declared, "to leave no stone unturned in order to eradicate all activities assisting Chiang Kai-shek" (head of the Chinese central government).

Arita's warning to the western powers with respect to east Asia and the south seas was in terms sufficiently broad to include Germany and Italy in the event they might cast possessive eyes at the Oriental possessions of Great Britain or France.

WHAT JAPAN EXPECTS

Arita declared that "Japan expects the western powers will do nothing that will exert any undesirable influence on the stability of east Asia."

He asserted that "the countries of east Asia and the regions of the south seas are geographically, historically, racially and economically very closely related."

"They are destined to co-operate and minister to one another's needs, common well-being and prosperity, and to promote peace and progress," Arita declared.

"The uniting of all these regions under a single sphere on the basis of common existence, ensuring thereby the stability of that sphere, is, I think, a natural conclusion."

The foreign minister said that "this system presupposes the existence of a stabilizing force with which as a centre the peoples of this region are to secure their co-existence and co-prosperity."

PICTURE INDUSTRY AIDS WAR EFFORT

The Canadian motion picture industry has volunteered its services to the governments of the Dominion of Canada, mobilizing its forces from coast to coast in the Dominion on a "Win the War" campaign, under the chairmanship of N. L. Nathanson.

They will present government-made films and trailers, and distribute and foster pictures which tell the people of Canada the British side of the war story.

The Canadian motion picture industry's "Win the War" campaign will start off Dominion Day, Monday, when the sale of the War Savings Stamps will be introduced at theatres across the Dominion, the free show to be held on Monday, July 15, at 8.30 p.m.

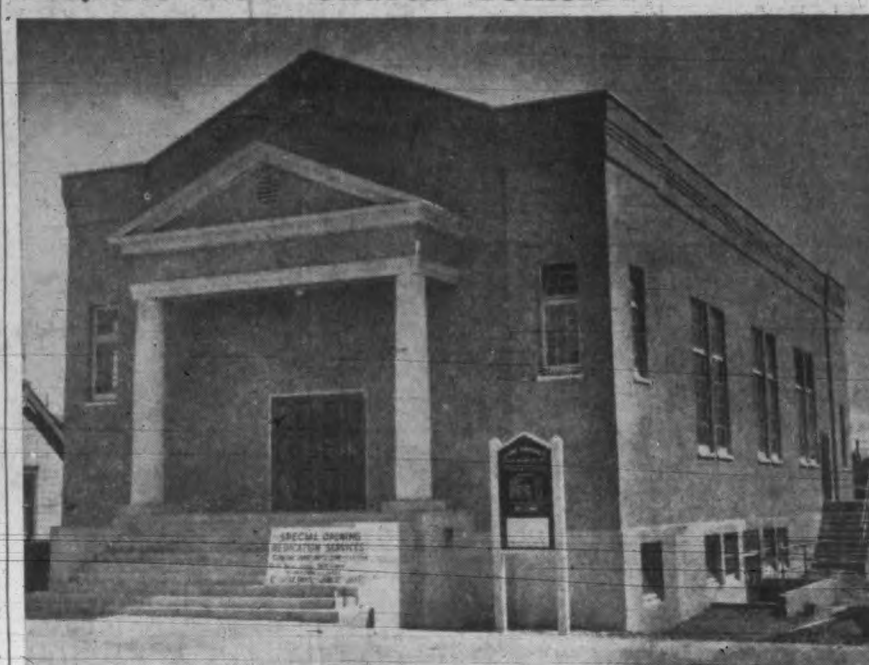

"For the first time in the history of motion pictures in Canada there has been a 'get-together' in which all are working for a service outside of their own for a service outside their personal interests," says a campaign.

which unites all on this "Win the War" campaign, is the same quality of service which has inspired every volunteer for active service. We have united in defence of liberty. We have pledged ourselves to win the war, with everything we have; this mobilization of the Canadian moving picture industry is the first victory of our service."

1940 Frolics Win Applause

The Russian Ballet School, which has given many stellar attractions to the artistic life of Victoria, scored again last night at the Royal Victoria Theatre where a large audience was delighted with the many good things offered.

"Footlight Frolics of 1940," the production was called and in every detail—costumes, lighting, stage department—it was near perfect. The dancing was up to its usual high calibre; indeed, perhaps there was improvement over former years, for the older pupils are now more advanced and have had a further year's work and study.

This year the performance was more than a pupils' recital—with the appearance of a Vancouver dancing class it became a first-class theatrical attraction.

VANCOUVER GROUP

Pupils of the June Roper School of Dancing, trained by June Roper and Dorothy Wilson, head mistress of the Russian Ballet School, who has spent half her time in Vancouver since September, presented a magnificent "Oriental Fantasia" with choreography by Roper and Wilson. It was beautifully done, with much fine interpretative dancing, a wealth of luxury in costumes and brilliant and spectacular lighting.

Wynne Shaw, who has been associate teacher at the local school was largely responsible for the many excellent offerings. It was she who did the choreography for "The Match Girl's Dream," an original ballet, featured by the finest of dancers, in fairy-like costumes of blue and mauve, yellow and pink, be-studded with silver and gold sequins.

Dorothy Wilson did the choreography for "The Clockshop," which spotlighted Robert Lindgren, a promising dancer of whom much should be heard in the future; and June Day, who has gained much finesse since she last appeared.

Excellent support was lent the dancers by William Tickle's orchestra. Reg. Bullock did a masterly job of the scenery and Stuart McKay of Vancouver arranged costumes and setting for several of the more elaborate numbers.

The teachers shared in the storm of applause that rose at the end of the performance and which continued while dozens of bouquets and other presents were handed over the footlights to the beaming young performers.

Taking part in the production were June Bell, Virginia Barrie, Shirley Price, Jane Pouncey, Arlene McKenzie, Heather Scott, Peggy McIven, Rosemary Element, Jean McMillan, Valerie Olsen, Beverly Law, Lorraine Hawkins, Carol Ann Graham, Diana Bradley, Elenore Straith, Sally Laundry, Sheila Johnstone, Dorinda Floyd, Maureen Walsh, Lorna Hawthorthwaite, Elaine Harte (who sang most pleasingly), Patsy Smith, Marnie Wilson, Audrey Brown, Patricia Coulter, Margaret Jean Angus, Agnes Richards.

CHURCH OF CHRIST SCIENTIST

"Christian Science" will be the subject of the lesson-sermon. The Golden Text is: "The prophecy came not in old time, by the will of man; but holy men of God spoke as they were moved by the Holy Ghost" (II Peter 1:21). The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Jesus demonstrated the power of Christian Science to heal mortal minds and bodies. But this power was lost sight of, and must again be spiritually discerned, taught, and demonstrated according to Christ's command, with 'signs following.' Its Science must be apprehended by as many as believe on Christ and spiritually understand truth."

MISSIONARY ALLIANCE

Rev. Frederic Morrison Landis, pastor of the Christian and Missionary Alliance, announces the opening of the new Gospel Tabernacle, located on Yates Street, between Vancouver and Cook, with dedication and evangelistic services beginning tomorrow and continuing through the week until next Friday.

A special dedication service to which all pastors and friends of the churches of the city are particularly invited will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3.

Rev. R. F. C. Schneider of Seattle, the district superintendent, under whom the church was incorporated as the local branch of the Alliance in January of this year, will offer the dedicatory prayer. Rev. H. F. Meltzer of Philadelphia will deliver the address, entitled "The War Cry of the Church." Evangelist Don S. McCrossan of Seattle will be in charge of the music and will render special instrumental and vocal selections. Ministers of the city will also have places in this service.

Three services are arranged for the day. At 11 a.m. the initial worship service will be addressed by Mr. Schneider with a dedication sermon. Mr. Meltzer will speak at 7.45 p.m. on "The Fourfold Gospel."

The Christian and Missionary Alliance has operated in Victoria as an unincorporated church group throughout the past 13 years. The new church, was built this spring. The work of the Alliance, which is a fundamental, evangelistic and missionary association organized in 1887 by the late Rev. A. B. Simpson of Toronto and New York, operating in the United States and Canada and 20 foreign missionary countries, was begun in Victoria in 1927 by the Rev. T. J. McCrossan of Seattle. Rev. Dr. Daniel Walker of Victoria served for some years as the first pastor of the church. He was followed by Rev. Nathaniel Strain, who resigned this past winter to enter the evangelistic field.

Mr. Landis was installed as pastor on Easter Sunday last, having come to the city from the Alliance Gospel Tabernacle in Wapato, Wash.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD

A FEW HUNDRED YEARS AGO, PEOPLE THOUGHT...

...THAT THE ISOLATED ROCKS AROUND THE COUNTRYSIDE WERE WASHED THERE BY THE BIBLICAL FLOOD! NOW WE KNOW GLACIERS LEFT THEM.

...THAT LIVING THINGS WERE GENERATED SPONTANEOUSLY OUT OF DEAD MATTER.

...THAT IT DIDN'T MAKE ANY DIFFERENCE HOW MUCH WILD GAME WAS SLAUGHTERED AND WASTED... FOR THERE WOULD ALWAYS BE A PLENTIFUL SUPPLY.

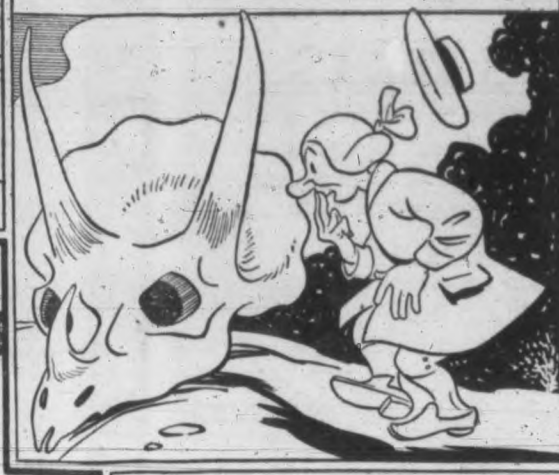

...THAT ELECTRICITY WAS A MYSTERIOUS KIND OF FLUID! EVEN TODAY WE DON'T KNOW FOR CERTAIN JUST WHAT IT IS.

...THAT THE FOSSIL BONES OF DINOSAURS WERE THE BONES OF ANIMALS WHICH GOD HAD STARTED TO CREATE... AND HAD DISCARDED.

...THAT HUMAN BLOOD WAS THE SOUL ITSELF! THEY KNEW NOTHING OF BLOOD CIRCULATION.

...6:30

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, JUNE 30
Good and ill omens are discerned for today. There is a benefic aspect for the clergy who will have extra work through the coming year as humanity seeks answers to the riddle of life. Churches will benefit through united effort for the general welfare. The evening is auspicious for meetings.

MONDAY, JULY 1
This is rather an uncertain day marked by conflicting aspects. Neptune is in benefic aspect while Uranus is adverse. In certain parts of the country extreme heat is indicated. The stars favor persons who exercise authority.

Women today are subject to depressing and disturbing influences. They may be irritable and discontented, difficult to please and inclined to look on the dark side of things. The stars prognosticate financial as well as sentimental forebodings. This is not a promising sway for love affairs.

The coming week should bring much activity in the world of trade. Banks and banking will command unusual attention as the international problems multiply. In the month of July, widely scattered uprisings will add to the general anxiety regarding the breaking down of civilized methods of trade and commerce.

The madness and futility of conflict which blots out the lives most useful to warring nations will be recognized more and more as a spirit of rebellion against those responsible for the war flames up in the totalitarian armies.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year of good fortune in business associations.

Children born on this day probably will be pleasure-loving, lovable, intelligent and quick-witted. Many are extraordinarily talented in music or the arts.

BULETINS from the movie zone:

The records will be distributed among hospitals, training camps and field bases of the British and French forces. Stories in Stamps

FOCH SAW RENEWAL OF EUROPE'S WAR

MARSHALL FERDINAND Foch, commander-in-chief of the allied armies during the final stages of the World War, had no hope that the Armistice would bring Europe peace. Before his death on March 19, 1929, Foch expressed his belief that nations would fight again, despite the League of Nations, world courts and anti-war treaties. Foch is pictured on the stamp above, one of a French series of four war charity semipostals. Foch's plans for a military frontier for France along the Rhine were rejected by framers of the Treaty of Versailles. While he did not advocate annexation of the Rhineland by France, he urged construction of forts along the river. He held the peace treaty deprived France of her victory.

WOMEN FIGHT IN WAR; AID IN HOME DEFENSE

WOMAN'S part in war, symbolized by the French war charities stamp above, is vastly greater today than in 1914-18. Although there is little possibility that women will fight in the trenches beside men as girl soldiers did in the Spanish civil war, there are more opportunities for them to do their bit behind the lines. England's "Wats and Wrens" — Women's Auxiliary Territorials and Women's Royal Naval Service — have carried war work beyond the knitting and nursing stage. They are on duty night and day as air raid wardens, fire fighters, as messengers, clerks, truck drivers, storekeepers, and cook. The "Waafs" — Women's Auxiliary Air Force — supply civilian pilots, office assistants, fabric workers, cooks. In all embattled nations women are serving as nurses, ambulance drivers, munitions workers and farm laborers. They are taking over jobs in factories, stores, on trains and buses to release more men for fighting. War is no longer man's work alone. The women fight, too.

"UGLY DUCKLING" TELLS ANDERSON'S OWN STORY

THE STORY of the "Ugly Duckling," pictured on the Danish stamp, above, honoring Hans Christian Andersen, was the author's own life history, told in a fairy tale.

This story tells of a little swanling, hatched in a flock of ducks, despised by the mother duck and all the little ducks for its uncommon ugliness and difference in looks and manners from themselves. Only at the last does the little duckling learn he is really a beautiful swan, admired by all.

Hans Christian Andersen was an ugly duckling. He was poor, comparatively uneducated, far from handsome. He lived in a land of fantasy, imagining himself an actor, later writing plays. People laughed at him, even after he achieved some success.

His fairy tales brought him fame and, like the duckling, people admired him; his home town was illuminated in his honor. His fame continued to spread, after his death, and today the entire world remembers the "ugly duckling" as the author of the best-loved stories of childhood.

FAIRY-TALES NEVER CAME TRUE FOR AUTHOR

AND THEY lived happily ever after. The usual happy ending of Hans Christian Andersen's fairy tales was never his in real life.

He was never transformed from a unattractive, poorly-dressed pauper into a handsome prince and he never married the princess. That happened for him only in the stories that have delighted thousands of children.

Hans Christian Andersen, honored by the Danish stamp above, one of an issue of three, honoring the 125th anniversary of his birth, was unlucky in love and remained a bachelor until his death, a tired but happy old man of 70. He was in love many times — or thought he was — but someone else always won the girl.

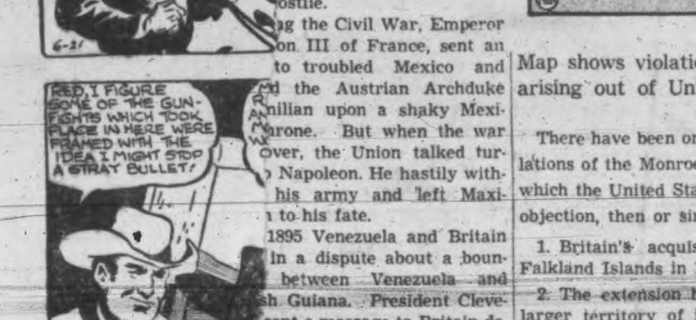

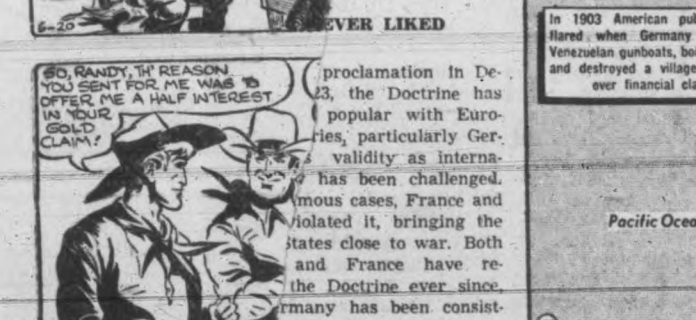

One of his greatest loves was Jenny Lind, "the Swedish Nightingale." She was fond of the writer, too, but he lacked courage to propose. It may have been true that the singer preferred a career to marriage at the time, but she married six years later.

For Americans,' Says Hitler as Back Up Monroe Doctrine

There have been only three violations of the Monroe Doctrine to which the United States made no objection, then or since: 1. Britain's acquisition of the Falkland Islands in 1833. 2. The extension by Britain to larger territory of its colony of British Honduras in 1859. 3. The transfer of the island of St. Bartholomew from Sweden to France in 1877. Germany was particularly hostile to America during the war with Spain. The German Foreign Office figured a victory for America would strengthen the Doctrine. Further, America would fall heir to Spanish possessions in the New World. Germany led the European big powers to send a note to America, seeking to prevent the war with Spain. The Germans wanted something like direct intervention, but France and England would have none of it. Having been thwarted in his hope to get the Philippine Islands, because the United States took them over, and also disappointed in his hope to purchase Pacific Ocean islands which Spain had once owned, the German kaiser was constantly rumored aiming at getting naval and coaling bases in Cuba and purchasing islands in the West Indies, a threat to the Panama Canal. An amendment to the U.S. army bill in March, 1901, was the answer. The principal clause was that Cuba was not to permit any foreign power to secure partial or complete control of the island. The next move came in 1902 when the United States arranged to purchase the Danish West Indies. The plan was defeated by the Danish Parliament. In 1903 Germany, Britain and Italy, having financial claims against Venezuela, blockaded Venezuelan ports without protest from America. But when the Germans sank two Venezuelan gunboats, bombed a port and destroyed a village, American opinion flared. Germany decided she had better let the problem go to arbitration. In 1904 the financial affairs of the island republic of San Domingo were in a snarl. Rumor reached the United States that Dominican politicians wanted Germany to take control. Germany was more than willing. But President Theodore Roosevelt saw that Germany was not allowed to go into Domingo. The last brush with Germany came with the outbreak of the World War. It was feared Germany might buy from Denmark the Virgin Islands. Secretary of State Lansing informed the Danish minister in Washington that if German control of the islands seemed imminent America would seize them. Finally, in 1916, America bought them.

Men Like Lloyd George Never Too Old to Fight

By MILTON BONNER

IS DAVID LLOYD GEORGE at 77 too old to be an active member of the British war cabinet?

Why, Lloyd George is a youngster of 45. He carries the burden of time lightly. In the leisure of his early 70's he turned to a new job. He became a historian, writing his war memoirs with a mastery of style and an incisive thrust many a trained writer would have envied.

Today he is dean of the House of Commons, having completed 50 years of service as an M.P. He is still active. His voice—as silvery as his hair—still draws his fellow members when the word goes out into the lobbies—"L. G. is up."

He is still the greatest orator in Parliament, still a master of the cut and thrust of red-hot debate. The quicksilver quality of his Celtic brain still furnishes him with the devastating retort to rash interrupters.

He could bring to a cabinet post the qualities that marked him in the last war—dash, quick initiative, imagination, audacity, and finally, the capacity so rare in statesmen, that of presenting a case to the multitude and firing the people with his own enthusiasm, determination, and daring.

HISTORY SAYS HE'S NOT TOO OLD

A look at history strengthens the belief that Lloyd George is not too old.

Lord Palmerston, born in 1784, became prime minister for the first time when he was 71. He took the office for a second time at 75 and held it until his death at 81.

The "Grand Old Man" of English politics, W. E. Gladstone, born in 1809, became prime minister for the first time when he was 59 and held the job until he was 65. He won succeeding prime ministerships at the ages of 71, 77, and finally at 83.

His illustrious rival, Benjamin Disraeli, born in 1804, held his first prime ministership at 64, his second at 70, going out of office at 76. Bismarck remained chancellor of the new German empire until dismissed by Kaiser Wilhelm II when he was 75.

Lloyd George's contemporary, Georges Clemenceau, was an outstanding example of virility, boldness, and capacity at a very old age. In 1917, when the fortunes of the Allies were at a low ebb in the World War, Clemenceau, then 76, became premier of France. He uttered his indomitable cry, "I make war!" He stiffened the faint-hearted.

He cheered the soldiers at the front by mingling with them in the snow and mud. He locked up defeatists and rear-traitors.

SUCH MEN JUST DON'T WEAR OUT

The war won, he proved himself the same mental and physical dynamo in the peace conference at Versailles. He retired from office at 79, but in his 80's he undertook a trip to America to plead France's cause in speeches there.

I knew and many times interviewed the old man in the twilight of his life. But there was no twilight in his keen active brain. The English he had learned 50 years before still came readily to his lips. I asked him what he thought of Poincare—many times premier and once president of France—and his special hate.

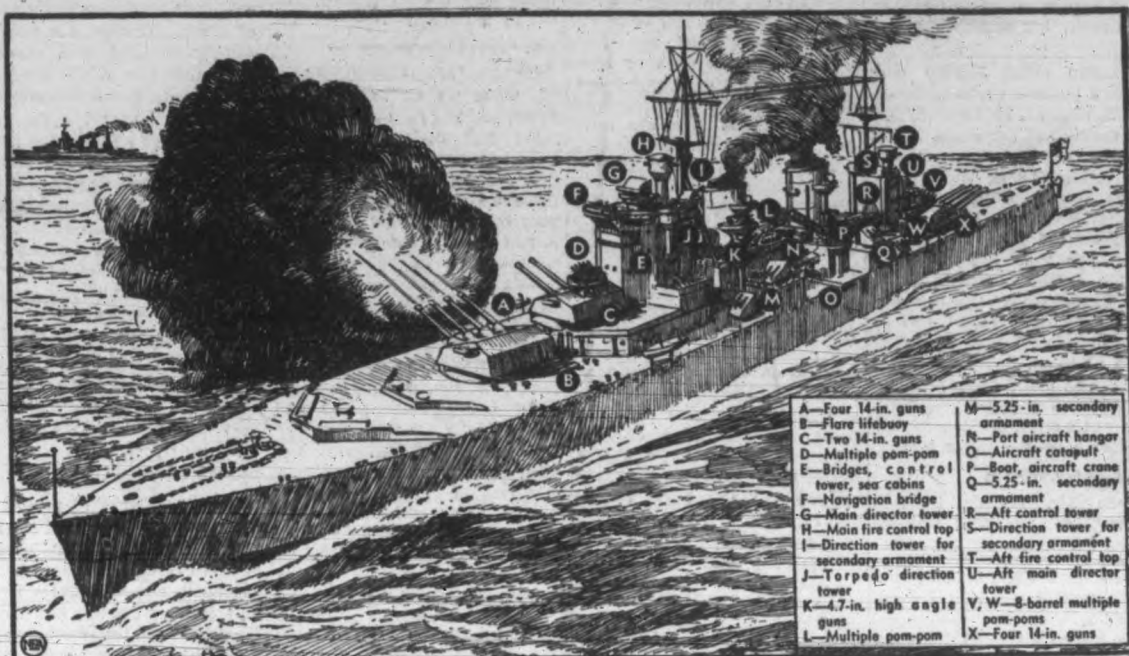

"Poincare is a damn fool," was the succinct reply.

"What do you think of M. Loucheur?"

"Now, my boy, you have got enough to quote for one day—Poincare is a damn fool."

Lloyd George has these same forthright qualities. Some day, like an old blade, he will wear out. But he will never rust out.

Britain, Still Betting Fate on Fleet, Commissions 5 High-speed Battleships

By MILTON BONNER

WHILE THE British fleet has been whittling down Hitler's navy, British shipyards have enhanced John Bull's sea strength with five of the fastest, best armored and most powerful battleships which have ever taken the waters.

These are now undergoing their trials and at some time in the near future will probably be ready to go.

These new ships are known as the George V class. Great speed has been manifested in their completion. The keel of the George V was laid Jan. 1, 1937, and the ship was launched Feb. 21, 1939.

The keel of the Prince of Wales was laid Jan. 1, 1937, and launching took place May 3, 1939.

The keel of the Duke of York was laid May 5, 1937, launching was Sept. 16, 1939. The keels of the Jellicoe and Beatty were laid the summer of 1937, launching was Nov. 11, 1939.

EVEN BIGGER SHIPS ON WAY

These five ships differ from any at present in the navy. They mount 10 14-inch guns in two quadruple and one twin turret. They fire a shell weighing 1,400 pounds, have a very high rate of fire and their range is superior to the 15-inch guns formerly prevalent in the bigger British ships.

In addition to these big guns, each of these new ships will have 16 5½-inch and many lighter guns, to say nothing of very formidable pom-poms and other anti-aircraft weapons invented by the navy and destined to give any Nazi bombers a hot time.

The most advanced British ideas on underwater defence against torpedoes, mines and bombs have been employed in these ships. In fact, these, together with the belt and deck armor, constitute 40 per cent of the weight of these 35,000-ton ships. They are among the speediest big vessels of war ever built. They are expected to attain a bit more than 30 knots or nearly 35 miles per hour. Each of them will have three aircraft and a complement of 1,500 men.

Nor is that all. British naval yards have under course of construction four monitors of 40,000 tons each, which it is predicted will be the "shootingest" boats ever built.

And on top of that, delivery will soon start of a whole flock of light cruisers and destroyers, which had been prepared for in prewar programs.

All this is just another sample of the faith Britishers place on the influence of sea power on history.

The island hub of our Empire still places its main reliance on its fighting ships, both for scraps and for blockade of an enemy.

Finland, Europe's Bright Spot, Shows World How to Rebuild

By THOMAS M. JOHNSTON

IN A EUROPE agonized by destruction, the brightest spot today is Finland. Once again, she is showing how a democracy should act.

The Finns are doing more than rebuilding their country after Russian devastation. They are pioneering in the greater task of the rebuilding of Europe that must follow the present terrific tearing down. The Finns' experience will be passed along through the League of Nations and, they believe, will be most valuable. For Finland today is a laboratory whose leaders are scientifically working out along humane and efficient lines the problem much of Europe must face.

10 PER CENT OF FARMS, INDUSTRIES LOST

If we faced a comparable problem, we should have lost 10 per cent of our farms, our industries, and our forests, and 17 per cent of our waterpower installations. We should have to reorganize our whole rail and water communications systems. But first we should have to provide jobs, a new life, homes and happiness for hundreds of thousands of homeless people, of whom almost a third were air raid victims, a sixteenth were orphans and the same number were wounded soldiers.

An eighth of Finland's people—500,000—are homeless. All must have roofs, and only 150,000 can get them through repair of damaged houses. The remainder, refugees from areas seized by Russia, must have new housing. Also they must have schools, libraries, churches. In meeting these human needs of the average citizen, Finland will spend $12,000,000. Priority will be given the job of repairing 46 hospitals; soon after will come the building of 20 new ones.

People who remain in existing cities will have built for them modern houses in new suburban areas. Others will live in 8 to 12 new cities housing from 400 to 1,000 families each. Factories will be built by the state and operated by wounded soldiers trained in new trade-schools.

DEMOCRATIC WAY STILL PREFERRED

Sixty thousand refugee families are country people. Many already are cultivating tracts loaned by the government, cities, or private owners. The Lutheran Church has given 400,000 acres. All buildings will be of the best quality. The Finns will spend $300,000,000 on housing alone.

Money is being raised by extending property taxes to various institutions hitherto untaxed, such as banks and railways, as well as to property owners with incomes starting at $800 a year. Should the task prove too heavy for Finland unaided, loans and investments from other democracies will be sought.

The whole problem is being thoroughly gone over in the Finnish parliament and newspapers. The Finns think that is the best way to get everyone's understanding and co-operation. Rising again from the ruins of totalitarian devastation, the Finns still prefer the democratic way.

'America for Americans,' Says Hitler So Americas Back Up Monroe Doctrine

By MILTON BONNER

IT WAS BISMARCK who called the Monroe Doctrine "a species of arrogance peculiarly American."

The Kaiser was well known to hold the same opinion. And Adolf Hitler despite—or maybe because of—his "America for Americans" declaration is believed by Americans to go Bismarck and the Kaiser one better.

That is the one big reason the United States matches German military triumph in Europe with moves toward a "cartel" of the 22 nations of the western hemisphere, including Canada, to control their vast food supplies and raw materials... the reason growing support comes to the proposal that the U.S. take over Allied American possessions... the reason the U.S. senate voted unanimously the legislation warning that the U.S. would not "acquiesce" in the transfer of western hemisphere colonies from one non-American nation to another.

EUROPE NEVER LIKED DOCTRINE

From its proclamation in December, 1823, the Doctrine has never been popular with European countries, particularly Germans. Its validity as international law has been challenged. In two famous cases, France and Britain violated it, bringing the United States close to war. Both Britain and France have respected the Doctrine ever since, but Germany has been consistently hostile.

During the Civil War, Emperor Napoleon III of France, sent an army to troubled Mexico and planted the Austrian Archduke Maximilian upon a shaky Mexican throne. But when the war was over, the Union talked turkey to Napoleon. He hastily withdrew his army and left Maximilian to his fate.

In 1895 Venezuela and Britain were in a dispute about a boundary between Venezuela and British Guiana. President Cleveland sent a message to Britain demanding arbitration. It was readily and amicably settled.

Map shows violations of the Monroe Doctrine and disputes arising out of United States enforcement of the doctrine.

There have been only three violations of the Monroe Doctrine to which the United States made no objection, then or since:

Daphne Has Her Hawks, Too

By NELLIE L. McCLUNG

WHEN THE cares of life grow too heavy for mortal endurance, and that time seems to have arrived, it is well to have some way of escape; temporary, of course, but nonetheless welcome.

A man called Harvey once wrote a poem in praise of ducks, which begins like this: "From the troubles of the world, I turn to ducks. Beautiful comical things, sleeping or curled their heads beneath white wings by waters cool." He likes to see them on the pool, tails uppermost, "or waddling, sailor-like, on the shores, or paddling with fan-like feet for oars. When they float, each bird a boat." And he likes to think, too, of how they sleep at night. "When night is fallen, you and I creep upstairs, but drakes and dillies meet with pale water stars, moonbeams and shadow bars and water lilies."

COMICAL THINGS

Then Mr. Harvey becomes philosophical and tells why he thinks the Creator made ducks—

"When God had finished the stars and whirl of colored suns,

He turned his mind from big to fashion little ones

Beautiful tiny things like daisies

He made them and then

He made the comical ones in case the minds of men

Should stiffen and become dull, humorless and glum."

And no doubt, that explains why bantams were made. A poultry-minded friend of mine tells me bantams are not a distinct breed of hen. They have been produced by selection of the small strains, for there are bantams, she says, of almost all breeds. Now, whether it is that their diminutive size makes it necessary for them to develop qualities of courage and resourcefulness in order to hold their own, I do not know, but it is true that bantams are known for their independent and clever ways and have made a place for themselves in agriculture as pest destroyers.

WELCOME BANTAMS

It was in this capacity that we decided to get a dozen bantams. Our neighbors have them and every morning we hear the bantam roosters waking the dawn with their glad salutes as they call out their forces to go earwigging. Bantams look after themselves. Roost in trees, find nests for themselves, hatch out their young, expecting no help or guidance from anyone.

But when ours arrived in a slated coop, I went out to welcome them. I felt I was the proper person to do this, having had advantages in my youth denied to the others. I had been the Keeper of the Hen House Door at the tender age of 11, and "mother's help" to many flocks in succeeding years. Many a time I hunted through wet grain fields to find lost young turkeys. I had taken broody hens off nests, shut them up in dark places, or tied colored rags on their feet for the same purpose. I had done dog's duty in driving off hawks when that warning cry rose from the farmyard. So I thought it was fitting that I should liberate these new birds and extend to them the hand of fellowship.

They were wild of course, and strange, and fluttered away from me with cries, but I felt sure they would quickly know me for a good hen-hand. However, they took up a position as far from me as they could and actually gave me the hawk sign. But I persevered and filled their water pan and put out grain for them, making all the encouraging noises I knew, and which had always brought Manitoba hens to my side, but I could see that "chookie, chookie, chookie" didn't mean a thing to them.

In justice to them I must say that they assumed full responsibility for the earwig situation and seemed to know just where our ground ended.

ISOLATIONISTS

It was not long until one of the hens decided to set. We found her sitting on discarded bulbs, with the rapt look in her eye which meant she had settled down for the long-term, looking straight ahead of her, grim and determined. She took no notice of anyone, but when one of her sisters came, beseeching the rich woman to spare a few bulbs out of her abundance, she gave battle with loud cries of rage. We slipped six eggs under her, feeling that all this effort must not be wasted. She sits there now, still grim and determined.

The best hen of the 11 is a modest little thing the color of brown wrapping paper. In the first week she disappeared and we knew she was a true bantam. The self-sufficient isolationist, who would neither borrow nor lend, ask favors or give them. We felt sure she had gone out on her own. One day she stormed up to the kitchen door, hungry and clamorous. She flew at the grain we gave her, in a panic, and ate like a criminal pursued by the police, and then vanished. Every few days she appeared in this burst of impatience, but we were never able to discover where she had her nest.

Then one day we heard certain small sounds which could mean only one thing. Investigation showed she had made her nest at the foot of a peach tree, which grows against a south wall. There she sat, well protected by leaves, thin, red-eyed, but happy. Her 21 days had been accomplished and she had 13 chickens to her credit.

But what we would like to know is, how could one hen lay 13 eggs and hatch them out at one time. Or is it possible that the other hens gave her a shower?

Her chickens are getting feathers now and make a pretty sight as they travel across the lawn. They get up even earlier than we do, and wait for us to appear. They assemble in the same place every morning, and when they see us coming, run out in a semicircle.

NO COMPLICATIONS

On that black Monday, June 10, when we all felt like Job as the bad news came in—Mussolini had declared war, our ships had been sunk in the North Sea, our gallant Minister of Defence and his companions had gone out in a second of time, I turned against the radio and went outside to visit with the bantams. Daphne and her brood were busy among the young tomato plants. (We call her "Daphne" because she turned into a tree when looking for safety. It should have been a laurel tree but the peach tree was handier.) On that black day I looked at her enviously. She seemed so safe. She has no complications in her life, her food and drink are provided in abundance, her country is not at war. She has no regrets or forebodings or hesitations. She wanders at will among the roses and daisies, sweet williams and regal lilies. She has security of tenure, the earwig crops never fail.

As I watched her, scratching and calling, a shadow crept over the lawn, and with a hoarse cry she fled with her family under the tree poppies, keeping very still until the danger passed. Then she gave them the all-clear sign, and they came out, cautiously. I got a knowing glint from her topaz-tinted eye. . . . How do you mean—safe?

Daphne has her hawks, too, but she carries on.

MUSIC ON RECORDS

CONSIDERABLE interest has been evoked by the new series of black-label Victor records (12-inches). Most are reissues of very old recordings, with a few newer foreign recordings never released in this country.

A random selection: Mendelssohn's lovely "Italian" Symphony—reasonably well-played and recorded for its age (G-8, re-issue); Mozart's Symphony No. 40 in G Minor (G-3, re-issue) which should be avoided because of the extreme reverberation in the recording; and Paderewski beautifully playing Chopin's Polonaise in E Flat Minor (V-36288) in a reasonable recording for its age but with extremely noisy surfaces.

SIBELIUS SERIES

THE GIANT of recent releases is Victor's issue of volume 6 of the Sibelius Society's albums containing a number of miscellaneous works of varying value played on seven records by Sir Thomas Beecham and the London Philharmonic (VM-638).

The list of works covers about 34 years of Sibelius' creative activity, from "En Saga" in 1892 to the "Tempest" prelude, his latest published work, in 1926. The album starts with "En Saga" (four sides), a true masterpiece of a tone-poem in the spirit of the Far North. The orchestration is typically severe but the work is bounding with life and energy. In some ways comparable to the final movement of the Third Symphony, this popular work represents Sibelius at his most approachable and exciting.

"Finlandia" (Sibelius). For an interpretation of this item appropriate to the recent situation of Finland, Arthur Rodzinski's treatment of the score, through the Cleveland Orchestra, can be highly endorsed. It is nervous, energetic, forthright—and beautifully played. The recording is exceptionally good. (Columbia 11178.)

"IN MEMORIAM"

A funeral march "In Memoriam" (two sides) follows. Respected hearings of its peculiar violence and fascinating somberness do much to reconcile one to the repellent form and method of this piece. The fine little tone-poem "The Bard" (two sides) is an exercise in mystery and ghostly whisperings, up to its single great climax. An intriguing, eerie, atmospheric piece.

Next, excerpts from the incidental music to "Pelleas and Melisande" (three sides) marked especially by the "Death of Melisande," a truly moving elegiac poem which is one of the gems of the set for its mournful beauty. The "Valse Triste,"

(one side) is superbly played, followed by two sides of storm music preluding "The Tempest," in which without any thematic material the orchestra turns it self into a huge wind machine to portray the clash of storm and waves.

Beecham is a noted Sibelius conductor, and his interpretation of these works is definite. The recording is absolutely amazing in its quality; indeed, just about the best orchestral recording ever heard. A person beginning to collect Sibelius should, I think, first own at least one of the great symphonies before coming to this miscellaneous volume, but then it will have its definite and precious place. Being a society album, none of the records is sold separately.

HANDEL'S SONATA

HANDEL'S SONATA for Two Violins in G Minor (Op. 3, No. 5) is also issued by Royale (R-603) played by Brown and Totenberg, accompanied on the harpsichord by Wolff. This is a very representative and appealing piece of Handel's music played somewhat rigidly and rather shrilly recorded. It remains a good buy, but the love-liest of all his sonatas should also be heard, played by Szeged (C-17098-9).

POPULAR FIELD

ROYALE also issues a first-rate piece of modern music (R-601.2) in Lamar Stringfield's "Moods of a Moonshiner," played by the composer himself on the flute accompanied by a string quartet. The work opens a window on guard on the cliff, and returns to the still in the dance finale. "A Moonshiner's Laughs." This is salty, original music, of no fixed tonality but milder in its harmonies even than Bloch. It is good because it is firmly national in its themes and tone, and because it knows precisely what it wants to do and then does it. Good recording.

If you can tear your eyes and ears away from the war news, Victor offers a sentimental stroll down memory lane—Volume 1 of "Song Hits of the Twentieth Century." This album confines itself to 1900; presumably succeeding issues will carry us forward. In 1900 among the hit tunes were: "Tell Me, Pretty Maiden"; "In the Shade of the Sheltering Palm"; "Just Because She Made Them Goo-Goo Eyes"; "Coon, Coon, Coon"; "A Bird in a Gilded Cage"; "The Blue and the Grey." Remember? These and other songs are sung by the Victor Mixed Chorus under Emil Cote's direction. (Six-ten-inch sides.) A tender poetry to the past.

BOOKS AND THINGS

MONS "ANGEL" A MYTH

ARTHUR MACHEN, novelist and essayist, who wrote that mythical first World War story, "The Angel of Mons," was a reporter on Lord Northcliffe's London Evening News at the time, and the story appeared in that paper during a visit Machen made to the western war front shortly after the Battle of Mons. It created a sensation and was eagerly accepted by a sorely tried people who refused to believe Machen when, later, he explained that it was only an allegory.

AS A YOUNG MAN, Arthur Machen was on the stage and a good actor he was, too. He looks like an actor—or a poet. I am afraid he has not made a great deal of money from his books, but that is not his fault. He cannot write pot-boilers. For an ability to create an atmosphere of nameless terror, many good critics think that he stands alone among living writers. Jerome K. Jerome gave Conan Doyle a copy of Machen's "Three Imposters" to read one evening, and Doyle did not sleep that night.

"Your pal Machen is a genius right enough," said the creator of Sherlock Holmes to Jerome, "but I don't take him to bed with me again!"

BRITISH FORTITUDE

THE SEVERITY of the life which British flying officers lived in the first World War is exemplified by an incident related by Winston S. Churchill. (In his reminiscences, "Thoughts and Adventures"). Mr. Churchill, now Prime Minister, was then Minister of Munitions, and therefore, responsible for the supply of airplanes. On one occasion he was "seeing things for himself" from the air during the progress of a general battle in France in 1918.

"WE HAD JUST returned from our flight on the line when a wounded machine struggled down into the airdrome," he recalls. "It was riddled with bullets. I counted myself over 30 holes in the fuselage and wings. But the engine was still intact, and none of the vital wires was severed. The observer was wounded in the leg, and sopping with blood. 'I WAS AN AUDITOR of the following dialogue:

"Squadron Leader: 'Well, what do you come down here for?'

"Pilot: 'I lost an observer last week through hemorrhage and I thought I had better get first aid as soon as possible for him.'"

"Squadron Leader: 'Where is your own airdrome?' A name was mentioned. 'Well, that's only a quarter of an hour on.'"

"Pilot: 'I thought you would give me transport on and we could come over for the machine in the morning.'"

"Squadron Leader: 'Well, all right, but it's very inconvenient. Do try to get home another time.'"

"WHILE THEY WERE lifting the wounded officer out of the seat," adds Mr. Churchill, "I tried to speak a few words of sympathy and admiration to the pilot who had emerged a few minutes before from a frightful ordeal. I clasped his hand and said, 'You have been splendid,' or words to that effect. But he did not seem in the least surprised by his chilly reception. 'It upsets all their arrangements if all the casualties come down here,' he said.

"Never has the human race displayed the fortitude which was the ordinary habit of the man in the Great War," concludes Mr. Churchill.

And he is still "carrying on!"

BARBER, JANITOR, SEXTON

AND LET US NOT be weary in well doing," wrote St. Paul to the Galatians. If Paul were with us today, in the flesh—as he is in the Spirit—and could spare the time to read the inspiring reminiscences "Forty Years a Country Preacher" of the Rev. George B. Gilbert, Episcopal minister extraordinary, of Middletown, Connecticut (and several other parishes), he would be well pleased, one likes to think. For, during 40 years of unique pastoral work covering 100 square miles of the Nutmeg State, the author shows no signs of wearying in well doing—on the contrary, he gets fresher and fresher, and better and better, as the pages fly by.

HIS BEST KNOWN charge is Emmanuel Church at Killingworth—the Church in the Wilderness. It had been closed for some time when Mr. Gilbert discovered it in 1909 "in the wilderness." Today it is the heart of his ministry of Practical Christianity.

"Strange things have happened in this church," he recalls. "Here we have fed the hungry and had cabbages in the baptismal font. We have baptized an old lady of 88 in a rocking chair and cooked stew within sight and smell of the chancel." But you must read it yourself.

"I WOULD NO MORE go down to one of my country churches without an ax than without my prayer book, or barber's kit. I'm janitor, sexton, bellringer and sweeper all in one," he chuckles. Also: "I have given over 5,000 haircuts." And I like this:

"A man said to me once, 'Do you really believe there's one minister in this state who actually enjoys his work, and is happy in it?' And I replied, 'Well, I can't speak for them all, but there is one at least who is not merely happy, but who has the time of his life every day.'"

I had a profitable and happy time reading the Rev. Mr. Gilbert's book—something to be grateful for in these dark days.

Describes New Aspect Of French Revolution

ENGAGINGLY DIFFERENT and tenderly achieved is Theodora Dehon's story of the French Revolution, "Heretic Dust" (Macmillan). There are scores of books on the terror that spread over France as the old regime tottered and fell, but they are filled with marching, singing sansculottes, with the ominous thud of the guillotine.

Not so "Heretic Dust." This is the story of the Revolution as it affected the peasants of Normandy, and their valiant though losing struggle to restore the monarchy.

Although Mile. Dehon's story of Louis-Auguste and Alexandrine is definitely episodic and covers an overly-lengthy period extending from their childhood to marriage, the mellowness and sympathy of her portrayal makes up for the deficiencies in continuity. Under any other treatment her story would have been incomplete.

It is in the early days of the Revolution when Alexandrine, daughter of a liberal, first visits the chateau at Boisdesert. Louis-Auguste assumes the role of protector and playmate of his little friend. But the Revolutionary edict, outlawing churches and priests, makes a man of the young hero overnight, strengthens his devotion to the Royalist cause.

As the story progresses, Louis becomes more and more involved in the Royalist intrigue, fights with the phantom Chouans and with that indomitable Louis de Frotte, who died heroically before a firing squad.

The rise of Napoleon I restored France to peace, and exiled Louis-Auguste and Alexandrine, but last permitted to return to Alexandrine and Boisdesert.

Mile. Dehon brings her story up to the 20th century with her dedication to a World War soldier on the last page of the novel.

"One of these lost sons of France was a great-grandson of Louis-Auguste and Alexandrine, and to his memory this story of the forebears and the home that he loved (as handed down by tradition) is dedicated."

Huxley Satirizes Immortality Quest

MAN'S AGE-OLD HOPE of immortality is the theme of Aldous Huxley's witty and brilliant satire, "After Many a Summer Dies the Swan" (Harper and Bros.). Set in a California locale, Huxley makes the most of his opportunities to poke fun at the amazing state and its many peculiarities.

In a novel crowded with amusing characters and situations, Huxley describes Jo Stoyte, millionaire oil man, industrialist and capitalist, imbued with a fanatic desire to live forever; Dr. Sigmund Obispo, Stoyte's physician, who is willing to help out immortality for a price; Jeremy Pordage, imported from England to catalogue the fabulous Hauberk papers, of which Stoyte knows nothing; Pete Boone, Dr. Obispo's assistant, with many problems of his own; Mr. Proper, philosopher and school chum of Stoyte, whose personal philosophy is the antithesis of his friend's; and Virginia Maunciple, described by Stoyte's chauffeur as "a young lady Mr. Stoyte's kind of friendly with."

Huxley seizes upon Mr. Proper to voice his philosophy, which retains its sharpness and brilliance of satire throughout the entire novel. But Huxley is at his best in making each character live, keeping each concerned with a personal problem. Proper has his dust bowl transients to worry about; Stoyte is torn between jealousy over Virginia and the desire to prolong his life; Obispo struggles to discover the secret of eternal life and to dupe Stoyte; Pete has his love of Virginia and his devotion to the Lyallist cause in Spain to worry about; Pordage is kept busy with the Hauberk papers and his observations on the life that goes on around him.

Then, through the Hauberk papers, Dr. Obispo discovers the secret, producing a magnificent conclusion. In a kaleidoscopic review, the characters march to their ultimate destination delineated by Huxley's brilliant pen.

Army Ants Give Lessons in Tactics

NOTHING IS MORE dramatic than a ture—so it seems to read Paul Russell Cutright's highly entertaining and fast-paced book, "The Great Naturalists Explore South America" (Macmillan). He is an incredible story of the habits, the life and death struggles of the strange creatures of river and forest from anteater to hoatzel. Excellent pictures are included. Excerpt briefly here is the story of the army ant who might well show the military men a few tricks:

"The army ants are widely distributed over most of tropical and semi-tropical America and are famed for their predator raids. There are many species that vary in size, color, habit and other respects. The army ants are carnivorous and hunt the prey in large, well-organized groups. No living animal can stand against their invasion.

"Each of the various forms has its own method of hunting. One species marches through the forest in single file. Another organizes its members into a phalanx that may cover as much as four to six square yards. The majority of these freebooting species, however, dispose themselves into long, swiftly moving columns. The width of these formations varies with the species. In some they are only three to four ants wide; in others, three to four feet. Several coumns may radiate from the nest, like the spokes of a wheel, and each may be hundreds of yards long and consist of untold thousands of ants.

"Those animals incapable of rapid flight, such as spiders, millipedes, harvestmen, worms and amphibians, are at the mercy of these six-legged plunderers. Some are able to scurry up the nearest shrub or herb or tree; sooner or later, however, an army ant will follow the same route and discover them. This ant will immediately relay the information to the main column, and soon a whole platoon will rush to the scene, where the unfortunate creature is summarily killed, dismembered and carried away. . . .

"The activities of army ants are all the more striking when we learn that most of them are totally blind. None of them have the compound eyes characteristic of most insects."

Ella Wheeler Wilcox

TO READ JENNY BALLOU'S "Period Piece—the Life and Times of Ella Wheeler Wilcox" (Houghton Mifflin), is to rediscover the America that existed from the Civil War to the World War. The "poetess of passion" was born in 1855, reached her heights in the gay '90s, so you have the setting. The incredible Ella, who placed "heart before art," supplied the rest and the result is a lively biography of the Wisconsin farm girl who wrote for the world. The story of one poem she wrote (or is supposed to have written) is excerpted briefly here:

On February 21, 1883, Ella Wheeler published "Solitude" in the New York Sun:

Laugh, and the world laughs with you;
Weep, and you weep alone;
For the sad old earth must borrow its mirth,

But has trouble enough of its own. . . .

(But soon after one John A. Joyce published a volume in which he included "Solitude" as his own poem.)

Both Ella Wheeler and Joyce have described the exact conditions under which they claimed to have written the poem. He remembered perfectly the whisky barrel on which he sat in Louisville, Ky.; she remembered in fine detail the February day of 1883 when, with a white dress in her suitcase, she was on the way to the inaugural ball for the governor in Madison.

The unwitting inspiration of the poem—a woman on the train with a black-bordered handkerchief—is as minutely described as the scene after the ball, when her host, Judge Braley, congratulated her. . . . However, the whisky barrel is no less clear in Joyce's mind. . . .

Whether the one took it from the other, or both borrowed it from someone else, it was Ella who put it, from whatever source, into circulation. Literary detectives have definitely attributed "Solitude" to her; and the body of her work, compared to that of Joyce's, certainly justifies the conclusion.

Seek 25,000-year-old ICE CHILDREN

BY EMILY C. DAVIS

FROM OUT OF THE past of North America there is being dug the story of Folsom Man—the Alexander Mackenzie of 20,000 B.C.

Even more remote from us in time, even earlier than the now famous Folsom Man, there are hints in the earth layers of the west of an earlier human, called Sandia Man, after a New Mexican mountain region.

The amazing fact is that not a scrap of human skeleton, much less a skull, of these primitive pioneers has come to light in archaeological digging. These Ice Age men, women and children who lived and died long before the Indians that Columbus found, are known by the bones of animals they killed for food and by the stone tools that they made, as did the better-known early men of Europe.

How they came, drifting and adventuring from Siberia to Alaska—the new world if they had only known it—is not yet revealed. It is believed that a land bridge gave them an easy crossing where Bering Strait now flows. Later, the land sank leaving only mountain tips as islands. That means that evidence of the real discovery of North America by Man lies fathoms deep in the sea, if the early immigrants were good pioneers and took lowland routes.

MISSING MEN

Like the missing man in a mystery tale, the Ice Age pioneers reveal their presence by a scattering of stone weapons and tools, and by the first of their cave and camp shelters found by modern investigators.

The characteristic trade-mark of the Folsom type of early inhabitants, a delicate stone dart or javelin tip with a groove down the centre, has been found in two-thirds of Canada and the United States. Folsom points they are called, and Folsom Man their makers are also named because the points first came to light at

Evidence that the 25,000-year-old pioneer has become a real North American character is the joking signpost at a spring near his old camp ground in Colorado. The sign reads: "Before the days of gin and beer, old Folsom Man took water here."

Folsom, New Mexico. They were great hunters, following bison herds and other big game of the primeval wilderness with daring and success.

Bent on rediscovering circumstances of Ice Age life in North America, archaeologists will dig this summer at western sites which already have yielded evidence of these first chapters of human history on this continent. The recent verdict of two geologists, Dr. Kirk Bryan of Harvard and Dr. Louis L. Ray of Michigan State College, that the Folsom camp at the Lindenmeier site in Colorado dates back 15,000 to 25,000 years ago—and more probably the latter—has settled for most scientists the presence of Man in America before the end of the Ice Age.

Sandia Man, whose distinctive stone weapons with bones of wild game were first revealed in a New Mexican cave, will be sought there further by Frank C. Hibben of the University of New Mexico. He has already done considerable digging there. His evidence that Sandia Man was a more ancient inhabitant than the famous Folsom Man consists of finding the Sandia relics buried deep in the cave, covered by a layer of barren soil. Over that was a layer containing Folsom Man's weapons and bones of game. Topping all in the cave floor, in a wet era stalagmites slowly formed by the drip overhead of water containing minerals.

SUMMER HUNTING SITE

Launching into the sixth summer of digging at the Lindenmeier site in Colorado, Dr. Frank H. H. Roberts Jr., Smithsonian Institution, expects that this summer's work will exhaust the possibilities of exploring there. The camp ground has already yielded an impressive amount of information for constructing a picture of the life of pioneers who broke the wilderness for the Indians.

"These people," explained the archaeologist, "made a scraper just well enough so that it would work. Cleaning bison hides was important, of course, because the people needed leather, clothing, thongs, and other articles of that sort. But for such work, fine tools were not vital, as weapons for killing game were."

"Imagine yourself trying to bring down a thick-skinned 2,000-pound bison that stood six feet high at the shoulder," he said. "And imagine doing it with a stone weapon."

But making them is not easy, Dr. Roberts said. It has to be done with a technique of removing the stone in a certain way.

Willie Winkle

From Glum Boys to Chin-up Boys

WELL, IT'S ALL over for another year. Now we have two months' holidays and everybody's mighty glad there's no more of this here spelling, arithmetic, science and scrapbooks until after Labor Day and then it'll be labor for us all again all right.

"Wonder what things will be like when we go back to school?" said Pinto, as we were wandering home from our last day at school.

"Why, it'll be the same old thing all over again," Jack said. "More lessons and more studying. Won't be so bad if we get some different teachers. Perhaps they'll switch them around."

"Naw, I don't mean that," said Pinto. "I mean what will the world be like?"

"Well, what can happen to the world?" I asked. "It'll still be going around every day and there'll be night and new moons and flowers and lots of nice things."

"Yeh, but the war's making everything different," said Pinto. "Don't you read the papers. Don't you see what old Hitler and Mussolini are doing to Europe and it looks like the Japs are going to do something over in Asia. Just as though our geography ain't hard enough now to study without these fellows going and changing everything all around."

"Aw, you kids make me sick," said Jack. "What's the good of us worrying about it. We can't do nothing. We're too young. Why don't you go on and have a good time this summer. Go swimming and sail a boat even if it's only in the wading pool at Beacon Hill. Sure we got so much to be happy about here and what good'll it do if we do get worrying about the war, I ask you?"

"Well, it's all right for you to say don't get worrying about the war, but that's all I hear at meal-times at home," said Pinto. "Just seems nobody's having good times any more."

"Aw, here comes the Glum Boys," we heard Betty say as we reached our place. Betty was under the maple tree talking to Rosy and Joan.

"What do you mean, Glum Boys?" Pinto asked. "Bet they're talking about the war," Betty said to the girls.

"Well, what if we are?" said Pinto. "Aw you make us sick," Betty said. "That's all you boys think about, war. And you walk along as if you had to solve it yourselves. Why don't you get a pleasant look on your faces, goodness knows they look bad enough when you're even smiling."

"We ain't glum," said Jack. "You know how it is. We're just wondering what the world's going to be like next September."

"Well, all I know is the world's pretty rosy today," said Rosy. "Why, do you know when we got our reports today we were all scared to death? There wasn't anything on mine in the space where it says 'Promoted to Grade'—? It wasn't filled in and I felt sick in the tummy. I looked over at the kids all around and they looked sick, too. Then after awhile the teacher said: 'The whole class is promoted so I didn't bother filling in the space for promotion.' Say, you should have heard the yell we let out. It was just like the cartoon in the Times. You know, the one about 'Ain't it a Grand and Glorious Feeling'—? I think I'll send that one down to Miss Claire Briggs who draws that funny. War or no war they ain't going to make me feel downhearted, today. But maybe I would have been if I hadn't passed."

"Anybody here didn't get promoted?" asked Betty. She looked at each of us but everybody passed.

"Well, why aren't you happy?" asked Betty. "Why I think it's a miracle that Willie and Skinny got promoted. Of all the dummies!"

"I ain't a dummy yet," said Skinny. "But every year the lessons seem to get harder and it won't be long before I will be a dummy."

"Aw, what's the matter with you, Skinny?" I said. "I never saw anybody lick you yet. My old man—I mean my father, I better be careful—always says when I get downhearted to keep my chin up. I bet Skinny can learn just as good as the rest of us."

WELL, WHY DON'T you be the Chin Up Boys instead of the Glum Boys?" said Betty. "You'll all grow up to be under-takers the way you're going now."

"Betty, Babe, Willie," it was mother calling from the back porch.

"Don't answer," I said. "Yes, we better or she'll get mad," Betty said.

"Betty, Babe, Willie," it was mother calling again. Then we heard her blow our whistle and that usually means we're wanted important-like.

"Better beat it," I said. "Bet she wants me to cut the lawn. See you kids later."

Betty and Babe and I went in and mother was so glad to hear that we'd all been promoted and then she said: "Now children, I want you to get busy right away. We've got to get ready for camp. It means lots of work for mother and you'll have to help."

And what we did was like a lot more kids have been doing I guess, 'cause so many people are going off to their summer cottages this week-end. Packing tinned goods, pots and pans, blankets, towels, food and goodness only knows what else. Every once in a while mother would call out: "Have you got the matches?" or "Have you got the iodine?"

I don't know why it is but I don't get any fun out of doing that kind of work although I know somebody's got to do it. I guess we're all the same, expect our parents to do it for us. But I guess we ought to be better sports and remember that our parents deserve some fun and rest as well as we do. So I got Betty and Babe to come down in the basement and we made a treaty all our own. We agreed that this summer we'd do more work around camp and around home when we come in to water the garden and when we are told to do something we'd do it without having to be told a dozen times.

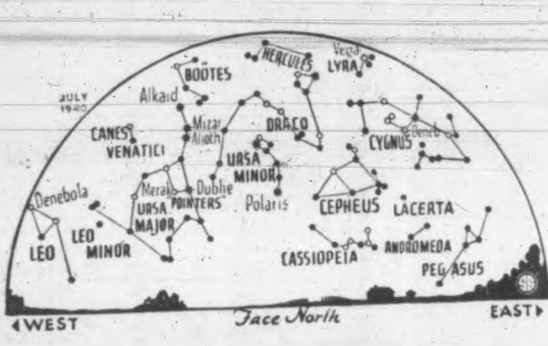

"And listen here," I said. "This ain't going to be no Hitler treaty. We're going to keep this one and if anyone should break it the other two will do the punishing."

"Yes, but suppose it's Willie that breaks it?" asked Babe. "We two girls can't punish you, you're too strong."

"All right then I'll let you have dad on your side," I said. "He can still lick me but I don't think he'll be able to do it much longer."

And that's settled and I don't think it would be a bad idea for every boy and girl to sign a similar treaty to help their mothers and fathers this summer.

Constellation of Scorp

By JAMES STOKLEY

LOW IN the southern sky on July evenings we can see the constellation that, perhaps more than any other, suggests summer to those who know their stars. Just as the three stars of Orion's belt, and those nearby, dominate the winter evening, so does the curved tail of Scorpion, the scorpion, shine to the south at this time of year. Unfortunately it is that the scorpion is always low in the heavens, where the greater amount of air through which the light of its stars must penetrate makes them dimmer than if they were higher. From a point in the southern hemisphere, or in the tropics, the scorpion is much higher, and its beauty can be better appreciated.

not now compare them, because Mars is not in a good position to be seen at all this month.

To the left of Scorpion is Sagittarius, the archer, a group resembling a teapot in outline. The spout is next to the curved tail of the scorpion, and the handle is indicated by four stars in a little quadrilateral to the left. These four stars, by the way, form the bowl of the "milk dipper," perhaps the least familiar of heaven's three dippers.

The most prominent dipper is the great one, part of Ursa Major, the great bear, which we see to the northwest. The lowest stars in the big dipper are the pointers, which show the way to the pole star. This, in turn, is at the end of the handle of the little dipper, part of Ursa Minor, the lesser bear.

By following the curve of the big dipper's handle southward, we come to the bright star Arcturus, in Bootes. And then, continuing the curve farther, we reach Spica, brightest member of Virgo, the virgin.

"NORTHERN CROSS" High in the east is the most brilliant star of the summer evening: Vega, in Lyra, the lyre. Below it is one end of the figure of Cygnus, the swan. The most prominent stars of this form the "northern cross," seen lying on its side, and has Deneb at the top.

right of Cygnus may be Altair, in Aquila, the eagle. He has two fainter stars which tend it directly above and below.

No planets are now visible in the evening, but two can be seen in the morning, before sunrise. Jupiter appears soon after midnight, in the constellation of Aries, the ram. Far brighter than any other star or planet then visible, one can find it readily. Just below it is Saturn, considerably fainter, though equalling first magnitude star. Venus is gradually coming into the morning sky. By July 15, it will rise about an hour and a half before the sun, and will be even more brilliant than Jupiter.

ORIGIN Where the constellations originate, no one can say for sure, but it is believed, however, that they originated in one place. In a recent report to the British Astronomical Association, Mrs. D. Maunders, recognized as authority on the history of astronomy, said:

"The whole of the old constellations, as described in the Phenomena of Aratos, which was a complete system of the sky, were named by the Greeks."

Vacation Dreams Come True in More Than Inches

WITH THE happy cry, "School's Out!" echoing from the lips of youngsters throughout the city as summer vacation begins, Y.M.C.A. Camp Thunderbird sends out an invitation to boys 10 years and older, to spend a week or two at picturesque Glitz Lake in the Sooke Hills.

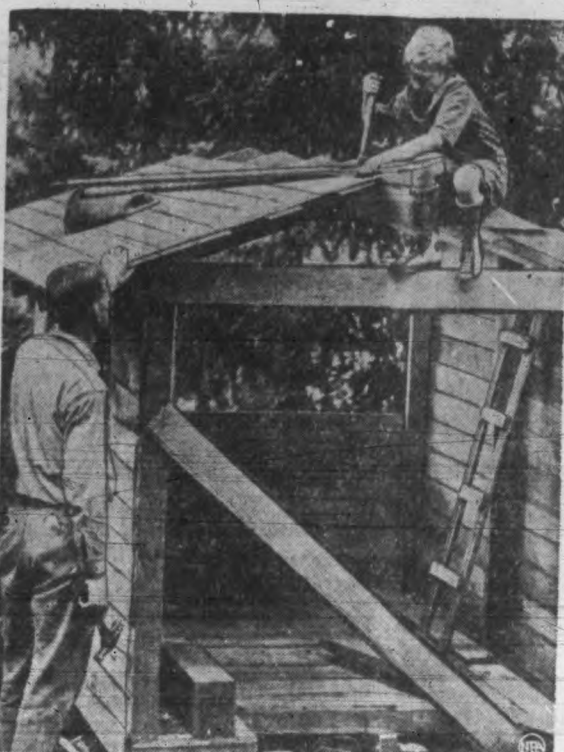

The word "camping" stirs the imagination of normal healthy boys. The call of the outdoors is a strong one. Every boy desires to have the thrill and adventure of living and playing outdoors. An organized camp makes it possible for him to do this in a supervised boy community.

The Victoria "Y" has conducted camps for over 35 years as one of its summer features. Days spent in playing, hiking, swimming and by the campfire have given happiest memories for hundreds of boys.

Camp Thunderbird is owned and operated by the "Y." It consists of 320 acres of wooded and hilly country at 1,000 feet elevation, 20 miles from Victoria.

Study of Indian handicrafts is applied to small totem pole, later to be erected on camp grounds. Model airplanes, wood carving, puppetry are also popular.

Parents Can Guide His Emotional Evolution

Here father and son are building more than just a playhouse. They are cementing a confidential relationship that will last and be a source of emotional strength as the boy meets his everyday problems. Such "play" helps child's mental, as well as physical, development.

EXCELLENT SWIMMING

The site contains Glitz Lake, a lovely little lake of 15 acres which provides excellent swimming accommodation. The surrounding country gives every opportunity for hiking and mountain climbing and abounds with wild life.

Last year the camp equipment and site were greatly improved under a forestry service project of the provincial government. The whole lakeside and immediate camp grounds have been cleared. Proper trails have been constructed and the initial clearing for a playground is now being made.

Living accommodation for campers are wooden floors with three-foot sidewalks and rafters to support a tent roof. The camp has a permanent dining-hall and kitchen which are well equipped, a log-recreation lodge and several small huts for workshops and other uses, water is piped to the kitchen from a large storage tank and a wash-house provides shower bath facilities.

The waterfront has a large swimming float and diving tower and an enclosed area for swimming supervision.

Older boys' camp will be for two weeks from July 11 to 25. Registration will be accepted for one week. Junior camp will be for 10 days starting July 26. Any boy over 10 years can attend the camp whether he is a member of the Y.M.C.A. or not.

The camp will again be under the direction and personal supervision of Vivian Shoemaker, boys' work secretary of the "Y," who will be in charge for his 12th season. He will be assisted by a group of selected and able leaders. The camp is under the supervision of a committee of businessmen under the chairmanship of W. T. Straith, M.P.P.

NEXT WEEK 11 acres of natural grass and wood-lands at Sooke Girl Guide Camp will be resounding with instruments of labor and fun of happy, carefree, teen-age girls.

Down winding pathways girls go arm-in-arm, telling stories of last year's fun, or breaking in a first-year camper. Some girls at camp learn lifesaving, another works on her music badge requirements; others study for the ambulance badge.

Girls will continue their camping for two weeks, then their time is up and they return to their homes to make room for other companies.

DO ALL WORK

Guides from the island companies, usually two companies at a time, make up the entourage, probably 30 in all. To look after all these youngsters each camp-has its own qualified nurse, lifesaver and experienced camper Guide.

All the work is done by the Guides themselves. The girls love to cook, and if given the choice of hiring a cook or dishwasher, they choose latter every time.

At 6.30 those on camp orderly duty for the day get up and light fires. In the still crisp air they make, fuzz sticks to get a really good blaze, light the fire with only one match . . . and then it goes out. Ah, no, there it is! The kettle soon boils and at 7 the rest of the camp turn out, attired in trim blouses and shorts. First on the program is colors and prayers, then breakfast, followed by the washing up. Blankets are aired, camp cleaned after last night's bonfire, water drawn, washing places set right, vegetables prepared for dinner. Scarcely is this done when captain and her escorts inspect tents, and woe betide any Guide who has left her bed unmade.

The morning sun is high, day is glistening like a jewel and the water looks invitingly cool. Two patrols plunge into the sea, watched by lifeguards who give help in swimming. Enthusiastic beginners and strict neophyte divers. Patrols hike, splitting up into two groups, one to lay a trail, the rest to follow a 10-minute start.

EVERYBODY has always known what was the matter with marriage, but, like the weather, no one has ever done anything about it except to complain of it.

are the two major causes of domestic friction and have been first aid to more divorces than anything else. Dishwater coffee, soggy toast and overdone eggs cause countless men to bang out of the house of a morning after using language that left their wives weeping into their plates.

It is a grand idea, and perhaps this simple home remedy of making the matrimonial offenders take their own medicine will do more to cure domestic ills than all the high-fangled nostrums prescribed by the moralists and psychiatrists.

Suppose, for instance, the man who is always telling his poor little, workworn, nerve-wracked wife that he doesn't see what she has to complain of, and why she is always saying she is tired; that he wishes he didn't have anything to do but stay at home and run the house and take care of the children, had to put in even a week cooking and washing and scrubbing and baby-tending.

Would he ever again speak lightly of woman's work? Wouldn't he forever afterwards regard her strength with awe and wonder why she didn't challenge Joe Louis and become the white hope?

What's sauce for the gander is sauce for the goose. Surely it would cure many a wife of nagging if there was a court order to make her keep her tongue behind her teeth while her husband ordered her around as if she were an imbecile child, and criticized everything she did and told her how much better he could do it.

Wouldn't the whining, complaining wives who are always reproaching their husbands for not making more money look upon them as heroes instead of poor dubs if they could be made to go out into the world and try to find a job and earn enough money to support a family?

Maybe what we always have needed to settle the domestic problem was just for husbands and wives to put themselves in the other fellow's place.

BY EMILY C. DAVIS
FROM OUT OF THE past of North America there is being dug the story of Folsom Man—the Alexander Mackenzie of 20,000 B.C.

Even more remote from us in time, even earlier than the now famous Folsom Man, there are hints in the earth layers of the west of an earlier human, called Sandia Man, after a New Mexican mountain region.

The amazing fact is that not a scrap of human skeleton, much less a skull, of these primitive pioneers has come to light in archaeological digging. These Ice Age men, women and children who lived and died long before the Indians that Columbus found, are known by the bones of animals they killed for food and by the stone tools that they made, as did the better-known early men of Europe.

How they came, drifting and adventuring from Siberia to Alaska—the new world if they had only known it!—is not yet revealed. It is believed that a land bridge gave them an easy crossing where Bering Strait now flows. Later, the land sank leaving only mountain tips as islands. That means that evidence of the real discovery of North America by Man lies fathoms deep in the sea, if the early immigrants were good pioneers and took lowland routes.

MISSING MEN

Like the missing man in a mystery tale, the Ice Age pioneers reveal their presence by a scattering of stone weapons and tools, and by the first of their cave and camp shelters found by modern investigators.

The characteristic trade-mark of the Folsom type of early inhabitants, a delicate stone dart or javelin tip with a groove down the centre, has been found in two-thirds of Canada and the United States. Folsom points they are called, and Folsom Man their makers are also named because the points first came to light at Folsom, New Mexico. They were great hunters, following bison herds and other big game of the primeval wilderness with daring and success.

Bent on rediscovering circumstances of Ice Age life in North America, archaeologists will dig this summer at western sites which already have yielded evidence of these first chapters of human history on this continent. The recent verdict of two geologists, Dr. Kirk Bryan of Harvard and Dr. Louis L. Ray of Michigan State College, that the Folsom camp at the Lindenmeier site in Colorado dates back 15,000 to 25,000 years ago—and more probably the latter—has settled for most scientists the presence of Man in America before the end of the Ice Age.

Sandia Man, whose distinctive stone weapons with bones of wild game were first revealed in a New Mexican cave, will be sought there further by Frank C. Hibben of the University of New Mexico. He has already done considerable digging there. His evidence that Sandia Man was a more ancient inhabitant than the famous Folsom Man consists of finding the Sandia relics buried deep in the cave, covered by a layer of barren soil. Over that was a layer containing Folsom Man's weapons and bones of game. Topping all in the cave floor, in a wet era stalagmites slowly formed by the drip overhead of water containing minerals.

SUMMER HUNTING SITE

Launching into the sixth summer of digging at the Lindenmeier site in Colorado, Dr. Frank H. H. Roberts Jr., Smithsonian Institution, expects that this summer's work will exhaust the possibilities of exploring there. The camp ground has already yielded an impressive amount of information for constructing a picture of the life of pioneers who broke the wilderness for the Indians.

"These people," explained the archaeologist, "made a scraper just well enough so that it would work. Cleaning bison hides was important, of course, because the people needed leather, clothing, thongs, and other articles of that sort. But for such work, fine tools were not vital, as weapons for killing game were."

"Imagine yourself trying to bring down a thick-skinned, 2,000-pound bison that stood six feet high at the shoulder! It took a big paw knock."

"And imagine doing it for it."

Tall Blue Salvia Wins Much Coveted Award

So popular has the scarlet sage been since Victorian days, too popular some may say, it has tended to obscure the fact that most of the sages have blue flowers; and the blue sages are considered by good judges to be the best members of the family.

Judges in the All-America trials this year gave honorable mention to a new strain of the lovely salvia farinacea which carries the variety name Royal Blue. This is the best annual blue salvia, growing 3 to 4 feet tall, and bearing flowers of deep blue in erect spikes, which branch freely from the main-stalk.

The blue of the sages is a cloudy blue, the kind which makes an ideal foil for other colors. Alone it might be dull, even the more tense version of it, which this new variety produces. But when it is combined with brighter colors, a double effect ensues; the blue makes the other colors brighter, while they in turn bring out the beauty of the blue. It is a perfect foil for all other colors, red, pink, yellow and orange go equally well with it.

Salvia farinacea royal blue.

For this reason, salvia farinacea makes a grand background plant in the annual border, or it may be set in among more brilliant colors, where it performs much the same function as the shadows in a painting, or the bass notes in music.

Salvia Royal Blue grows easily from seed which may be sown in seed box, seed bed or in the border where it is to grow.

If Popeye Had a Garden He'd Grow These Greens

If Popeye were a gardener he would not confine himself to spinach, as a pep builder-upper. Green leaves which are appetizing when well cooked all have value in the diet, and there are several different kinds which can be easily grown in the home garden.

In 25 days after planting you can be harvesting tendergreen, a variety of mustard, which produces large green leaves which, like Swiss chard, can be cut from the plant without disturbing the root, to be followed immediately by another crop.

There are several varieties of mustard, maturing in 30 to 40 days, which are popular for greens.

Spinach takes longer to mature—40 to 50 days—and does not like hot weather. It is harvested by pulling up the plant by the roots so that one crop is all it yields. A crop for fall may be sown in July, and will find the cool autumn weather to its liking.

Swiss chard is a species of beet which produces an insignificant root, but luxuriant broad leaves, which have a distinctive flavor which many like better than other greens. Chard may be cut off at the ground, and the roots will send up a new crop of leaves several times during the summer. It is highly esteemed for young children during the hot weather when spinach is difficult to grow.

New Zealand spinach is not a spinach, but a tropical plant which botanists call tetragonia expansa. It should not be sown until the ground is fairly warm, and then it should be given plenty of room, 2 to 3 feet between plants. In the northern states it grows to remarkable size, so that a peck of greens can be picked from a single plant once a week until frosts come.

Garden sorrel is a hardy perennial which bears edible leaves considered by many to be delicious. It should be sown in drills 18 inches apart, preferably in light shade, as hot sun is said to increase its acidity. The roots should be divided every four years.

To continue the greens program into the late fall and winter, sow in June seeds of kale or borecole. Transplant to rows with two feet between plants. It takes 110 days to bring plants to maturity, but frost improves the flavor and the plants continue to bear long after other greens have been killed.

not now compare them, because Mars is not in a good position to be seen at all this month. To the left of Scorpion is Sagittarius, the archer, a group resembling a teapot in outline. The spout is next to the curved tail of the scorpion, and the handle is indicated by four stars in a little quadrilateral to the left. These four stars, by the way, form the bowl of the "milk dipper," perhaps the least familiar of heaven's three dippers.

The most prominent dipper is the great one, part of Ursa Major, the great bear, which we see to the northwest. The lowest stars in the big dipper are the pointers, which show the way to the pole star. This, in turn, is at the end of the handle of the little dipper, part of Ursa Minor, the lesser bear.

By following the curve of the big dipper's handle southward, we come to the bright star Arcturus, in Bootes. And then, continuing the curve farther, we reach Spica, brightest member of Virgo, the virgin.

right of Cygnus may be Altair, in Aquila, the eagle. It has two fainter stars which tend it directly above and below.

No planets are now visible in the evening, but two can be seen in the morning, before sunrise. Jupiter appears soon after midnight, in the constellation of Aries, the ram. Far brighter than any other star or planet then visible, one can find it readily. Just below it is Saturn, considerably fainter, though equaling first magnitude stars. Venus is gradually coming into the morning sky. By July 15, it will rise about an hour and a half before the sun, and will be even more brilliant than Jupiter.

ORIGIN

Where the constellations originate, no one can say for sure. It is believed, however, that they originated in one place. In a report to the British Astronomical Association, Mrs. D. Maunders, recognized as a authority on the history of astronomy, said:

"The whole of the old constellations, as described in the Phenomena of Aratos, were revised as a complete system one epoch, by those astronomers who were named by Ar

LOW IN the southern sky on July evenings we can see the constellation that, perhaps more than any other, suggests summer to those who know their stars. Just as the three stars of Orion's belt, and those nearby, dominate the winter evening, so does the curved tail of Scorpion, the scorpion, shine to the south at this time of year. Unfortunately it is that the scorpion is always low in the heavens, where the greater amount of air through which the light of its stars must penetrate makes them dimmer than if they were higher. From a point in the southern hemisphere, or in the tropics, the scorpion is much higher, and its beauty can be better appreciated.

SUMMER POSITION

On the accompanying maps, we see the arrangement of the summer evening stars, as they are at 10 p.m. (standard time) on July 1, or 9 p.m. on the 15th. Scorpion is right over the south point of the horizon. Its brightest star is Antares, red in color, from which fact comes its name. This means "rival of Mars," for the planet is also red. We can

Red Rivers in North America, from Canada, passing through the city of Winnipeg, Minnesota. The other flows to the Mississippi. The mouth of Tonkin's Red River is a delta of 5,000 square miles, a region of rich soil.

Cows on Pasture

Pasture provides the cheapest food available for milk production and it is highly desirable to provide cows with an abundance of fresh green herbage as long as possible throughout the pasture season. Early grazing helps to accomplish this. It is suggested practicing rotational grazing, using annual pasture crops such as oats and sudan grass, and providing the cows with aftermath from part of the area used for hay. Also, silage and soiling crops can often be used to supplement the regular pastures, particularly during the latter part of the summer.

On good pasture cows giving from 30 to 35 pounds of milk daily need very little grain. However, cows giving over this amount require one pound of meal for each three pounds of milk produced above it. As young growing grass is high in protein, a meal mixture composed of home-grown grains, such as oats and barley is satisfactory.

With more mature grasses, how ever, it is advisable to add a small amount of linseed oil meal or ground soybeans to the home-grown grains in order to properly balance the ration. In addition, sufficient water, a supply of salt, and a mineral mixture should be supplied, taking care that the cows have shade and protection from flies.

Kodiak Bear "Fishes" for Salmon

A FEW weeks ago, I spoke of the Kodiak bear and the polar bear as "rivals" for the honor of being classed as the largest of all bears.

The only way we can judge the size of bears is by measuring those which are captured or killed. Hunters give reports of length and weight, and when they do the measuring with care, their reports help us to know the facts.

Extremely large Kodiak bears and polar bears have been found to weigh from 1,400 to 1,600 pounds. On the average it seems the Kodiak bear has a little more weight, and this explains the common statement that it is "the largest bear in the world."

If the Kodiak bear is the largest bear, it is also the largest of all flesh-eating animals. Such beasts as the elephant, the rhinoceros and the hippopotamus do not eat flesh. A Kodiak bear is from two to three times as heavy as any lion or tiger.

Kodiak bear. Often it is called the Alaska brown bear or the grizzly brown bear. Some hunters speak of it as "the big brownie" or "the great fish bear."

A baby brown bear is far smaller than we might expect. It is a "little ball of fur" which a hunter might hold in the hollow of his hand!

In the mother bear is nearly twice as big. I would not advise anyone to pick up a cub! In the eyes of the mother, that is a crime which means a fight. The mother is big enough and strong enough to tear a man to pieces.

MANY stories have been told about Kodiak bears attacking people, and men have died from such attacks. In these days, however, such events seldom happen. Like the grizzlies in the Rocky Mountains, Kodiak bears seem to have learned to run away from hunters with their high-powered rifles.

A Kodiak bear in captivity.

THE NAME of this animal is explained by a place in which it is found. Kodiak Island is off the coast of Alaska, and many of these brown-furred bears have been found there.

It would be a mistake, however, to suppose that island to be the only home of these bears. Hundreds of them live on the mainland of Alaska.

There are other names for the

One day Charles Sheldon was walking near the edge of a woods on Montague Island, off the coast of Alaska, when a big brown bear rushed out at him.

WELL, IT'S ALL over for another year. Now we have two months' holidays and everybody's mighty glad there's no more of this here spelling, arithmetic, science and scrapbooks until after Labor Day and then it'll be labor for us all again all right.

"Wonder what things will be like when we go back to school?" said Pinto, as we were wandering home from our last day at school.

"Why, it'll be the same old thing all over again," Jack said. "More lessons and more studying. Won't be so bad if we get some different teachers. Perhaps they'll switch them around."

"Naw, I don't mean that," said Pinto. "I mean what will the world be like?"

"Well, what can happen to the world?" I asked. "It'll still be going around every day and there'll be night and new moons and flowers and lots of nice things."

"Yeh, but the war's making everything different," said Pinto. "Don't you read the papers. Don't you see what old Hitler and Mussolini are doing to Europe and it looks like the Japs are going to do something over in Asia. Just as though our geography ain't hard enough now to study without these fellows going and changing everything all around."

"Aw, you kids make me sick," said Jack. "What's the good of us worrying about it. We can't do nothing. We're too young. Why don't you go on and have a good time this summer. Go swimming and sail a boat even if it's only in the wading pool at Beacon Hill. Sure we got so much to be happy about here and what good'll it do if we do get worrying about the war, I ask you?"

"Well, it's all right for you to say don't get worrying about the war, but that's all I hear at meal-times at home," said Pinto. "Just seems nobody's having good times any more."

"Aw, here comes the Glum Boys," we heard Betty say as we reached our place. Betty was under the maple tree talking to Rosy and Joan.

"What do you mean, Glum Boys?" Pinto asked.

"Bet they're talking about the war," Betty said to the girls.

"Well, what if we are?" said Pinto.

"Aw you make us sick," Betty said. "That's all you boys think about, war. And you walk along as if you had to solve it yourselves. Why don't you get a pleasant look on your faces, goodness knows they look bad enough when you're even smiling."

"We ain't glum," said Jack. "You know how it is. We're just wondering what the world's going to be like next September."

"Well, all I know is the world's pretty rosy today," said Rosy. "Why, do you know when we got our reports today we were all scared to death? There wasn't anything on mine in the space where it says 'Promoted to Grade —'. It wasn't filled in and I felt sick in the tummy. I looked over at the kids all around and they looked sick, too. Then after awhile the teacher said: 'The whole class is promoted so I didn't bother filling in the space for promotion.' Say, you should have heard the yell we let out. It was just like the cartoon in the Times. You know, the one about 'Ain't it a Grand and Glorious Feeling.' I think I'll send that one down to Miss Claire Briggs who draws that funny. War or no war they ain't going to make me feel down-hearted today. But maybe I would have been if I hadn't passed."

"Anybody here didn't get promoted?" asked Betty. She looked at each of us but everybody passed.

"Well, why aren't you happy?" asked Betty. "Why I think it's a miracle that Willie and Skinny got promoted. Of all the dummies!"

"I ain't a dummy yet," said Skinny. "But every year the lessons seem to get harder and it won't be long before I will be a dummy."

"Aw, what's the matter with you, Skinny?" I said. "I never saw anybody lick you yet. My old man—I mean my father, I better be careful—always says when I get downhearted to keep my chin up. I bet Skinny can learn just as good as the rest of us."

WELL, WHY DON'T you be the Chin Up Boys instead of the Glum Boys?" said Betty. "You'll all grow up to be undertakers the way you're going now."

"Betty, Babe, Willie," it was mother calling from the back porch.

"Don't answer," I said.

"Yes, we better or she'll get mad," Betty said.

"Betty, Babe, Willie," it was mother calling again. Then we heard her blow our whistle and that usually means we're wanted important-like.

"Better beat it," I said. "Bet she wants me to cut the lawn. See you kids later."

Betty and Babe and I went in and mother was so glad to hear that we'd all been promoted and then she said: "Now children, I want you to get busy right away. We've got to get ready for camp. It means lots of work for mother and you'll have to help."

And what we did was like a lot more kids have been doing I guess, 'cause so many people are going off to their summer cottages this week-end. Packing tinny goods, pots and pans, blankets, towels, food and goodness only knows what else. Every once in a while mother would call out: "Have you got the matches?" or "Have you got the iodine?"

I don't know why it is but I don't get any fun out of doing that kind of work although I know somebody's got to do it. I guess we're all the same, expect our parents to do it for us. But I guess we ought to be better sports and remember that our parents deserve some fun and rest as well as we do. So I got Betty and Babe to come down in the basement and we made a treaty all our own. We agreed that this summer we'd do more work around camp and around home when we come in to water the garden and when we are told to do something we'd do it without having to be told a dozen times.

"And listen here," I said. "This ain't going to be no Hitler treaty. We're going to keep this one and if anyone should break it the other two will do the punishing."

"Yes, but suppose it's Willie that breaks it?" asked Babe. "We two girls can't punish you, you're too strong."

"All right then I'll let you have dad on your side," I said. "He can still lick me but I don't think he'll be able to do it much longer."

And that's settled and I don't think it would be a bad idea for every boy and girl to sign a similar treaty to help their mothers and fathers this summer.

The Greatest Runner Was a Sailor

ERNST MENSEN, a Norwegian serving with the British navy, stood in despair in the streets of London. His leave was almost ended. In his pockets was not even the price of his fare back to Portsmouth.

He knew that if he failed to report in time to his ship he risked being arrested as a deserter. There was no chance of getting a lift. Only one hope was left to him. He must make a run for it.

Nine hours later he boarded his ship, as fresh as a daisy. He had jogged every inch of the way on foot.

The Norwegian set up that wonderful record more than 100 years ago. When he left the navy he decided to become a professional runner, but an unforeseen difficulty arose. Nobody would compete with him. In any race he was so far ahead that the rest were also-rans. So he began running, on his own, for wagers.

In 1831 he ran from Paris to Moscow, a distance of 1,760 miles. He left Paris at 4 o'clock on June 11. He reached Moscow at 10 in the morning on June 25. His average was 125 miles a day.

He never walked, but twice during the 24 hours he would rest, for 15 minutes, by leaning against a tree, a handkerchief over his face. His daily food ration consisted of one biscuit, with which he drank about one ounce of raspberry syrup.

In 1836, the East India Company took him into its employment. His job was to carry dispatches from Calcutta to Constantinople, a distance of 5,615 miles. No caravan had ever made the journey in less than 180 days.

Fifty-nine days after Mensen had left Calcutta he entered Constantinople. The caravans which had left with him reached Constantinople 120 days later, and proved the truth of his tale.

On May 11, 1843, he set out on the greatest journey he had ever undertaken. He began his journey at Silesia, and he was commissioned to find the source of the Nile, then undiscovered.

Off he ran, complete with biscuits and raspberry syrup. Through Jerusalem, he ran to Cairo. From Cairo he jogged on to upper Egypt. At the village of Syang he stopped at noon for his customary 15 minutes' rest. Natives stared curiously at the stranger with a handkerchief over his face and his back against a palm tree.

He had already set up endurance records never likely to be surpassed.

Hour after hour passed. Still he leaned against the tree. Then one native, more daring than the others, removed the handkerchief from the sleeper's face. Mensen had run his last race. He was dead.

"As I fell, my rifle dropped and in my confusion I grabbed the animal's fur with my left hand."

"The bear, I believe, was more surprised than I was. I felt its fur slip through my hands, as it quickly swung around and ran over a hill without making any attempt to bite me."

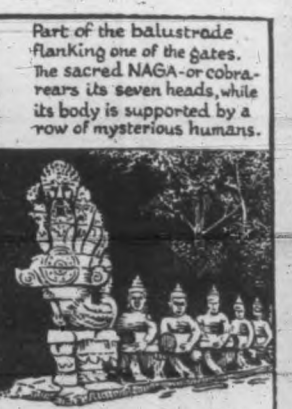

That was, indeed, a narrow escape. Although Sheldon thought the bear "rushed" at him, it may be that the animal had no intention of striking him and knocking him down.

This is the season when Kodiak bears obtain the food which they seem to like best. From June to October, salmon run in the rivers and streams in northwestern parts of North America. Resting on a log or rock, or wading in the water, the bears wait for salmon to come close. A fast sweep of a big paw knocks a salmon out of the water and up on the bank.

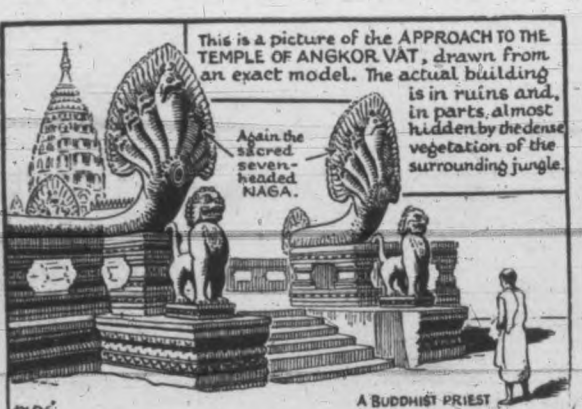

A Temple of Cambodia, French Indo-China

A great height of steps leads to the TEMPLE OF ANGKOR VAT.

Part of the balustrade flanking one of the gates. The sacred NAGA, or cobra-rears its seven heads, while its body is supported by a row of mysterious humans.

This is a picture of the APPROACH TO THE TEMPLE OF ANGKOR VAT, drawn from an exact model. The actual building is in ruins and, in parts, almost hidden by the dense vegetation of the surrounding jungle. Again the sacred seven-headed NAGA.

The men who built the mighty temple are believed to have been Hindus who worshipped Brahma, Shiva and Vishnu. In modern times, however, the temple has been taken over by Buddhist priests. The people of Cambodia sometimes say the temple was "built by giants of long ago." It is made up largely of red bricks and light brown sandstone.

Last week we had some pictures of Cambodia, and today our artist gives us views of strange relics found in that province of French Indo-China. Above we see ruins of the temple of Angkor Wat (also known as Angkor Vat). This temple is believed to date back at least 1,000 years.

In this illustration our artist shows the Angkor Wat temple as it probably looked in the days of its glory. The drawing is based on a model of the temple which was displayed at a French Colonial exposition. The ruins of the temple, as they exist today, include 532 stone columns.

Red Rivers in North America, running from Canada, passing through the city of Winnipeg, Minnesota. The other flows south to the Mississippi.

mouth of Tonkin's Red River a delta of 5,000 square miles of rich soil has proved of great use in the growing of rice.

The people of Indo-China eat a great deal of the rice they raise, but the crops are so big that much is left over for export. Vast shipments of rice are made to countries in various parts of the world.

Another export of Indo-China is silk. Silkworms are kept, and the silk from their cocoons is woven into cloth. Sugar, spices, cotton and rubber are among the other products of Indo-China.

Safely 'Over There'

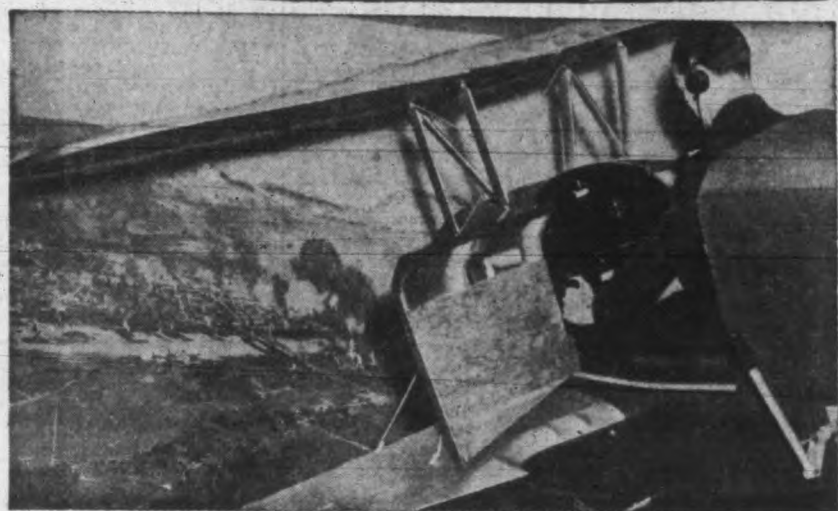

Two more R.C.A.F. squadrons arrive in England. It is announced this week, swelling Canada's airmen overseas to three squadrons plus an all-Canadian squadron which has been fighting with the R.A.F. Above, the departing members, drawn from Montreal, Winnipeg, prairie provinces and British Columbia, wave a cheerful farewell before embarking at an eastern Canadian port. Lined up for inspection, top left, squadrons await final inspection by Hon. C. G. Power, Minister of Defence for Air. Squadron Leader R. H. Foss is in the foreground. Lower left, "Goebbels," fighting cock who is one squadron's mascot, indicates preparedness for the fray. "Like the German propaganda chief, our mascot is always crowing," explains Leading Aircraftsman R. F. Charlton of Montreal, at right. Charlton was storekeeper for Imperial Airways Ltd., Boucherville, P.Q. during summer of 1939 when the flying boats Cabot and Caribou were flying regular routes to Montreal. Corporal R. G. Fair at left holds "Unity," traveling companion for "Goebbels."

For Canadians

Workmen paint the Canadian Coat of Arms over the main entrance at the Canadian Red Cross Hospital for sick and wounded Canadian servicemen in England.

GROUND-BOUND "PLANE"—Trainee at R.C.A.F. school in the old Eglinton Hunt Club, Toronto, tries his "ground wings" on new Link trainer, must take five hours' instruction before really "going up." One of purposes of ground-bound "plane" is to determine whether its occupant is best fitted to be pilot, gunner, or observer. Walls of room bear a painted landscape to give "flier" the impression he is really flying. He banks, turns, climbs, dives and even spins.

HER MAJESTY VISITS—Queen Elizabeth shakes hands with Lieut.-Colonel J. B. Stevenson of the Canadian Seaforth Highlanders on a visit, in company with King George, to a Southern area encampment to see regiments of the Canadian Active Service Force.

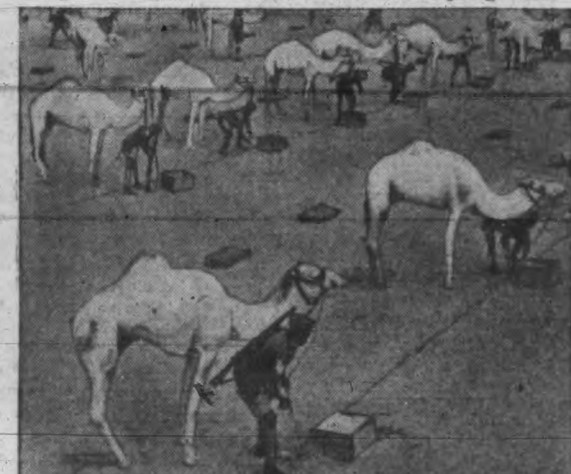

CANADA-BOUND—Smiling London schoolboys give the Tommy's famous "thumbs up" as they prepare to evacuate Britain's bomb-threatened capital for second time since war's start. This time they're coming to Canada, will arrive 3,000 strong in July. Over 100,500 Canadian homes are open to refugee and evacuee children, according to a recent voluntary registration. American families have also pledged aid.

TO FIGHT ON—French forces in Syria will fight on, defending "with indomitable energy the honor of France and her flag," according to a reported broadcast from Beirut, Syria, by Gen. Eugene Mittelhauser, above.

GUARD NAZI ENVOY—"Germany will not forget that, when she was fighting bitterly for her very life, the United States gave every material aid to her enemies." That warning, reportedly made by Baron von Spiegel, German consul-general at New Orleans, caused such resentment that he asked for protection. Here, a policeman guards the swastika-adorned (arrow) consulate. Von Spiegel denied making the statement.

DESERT SHIPS—Mechanized warfare or not, Britain's famous Camel Corps, pictured encamped in Egypt, plays an important role guarding the Empire's lifeline, the Suez Canal, against attack from Italy. Sprinting nimbly over shifting sands, these ships of the desert act as vanguard for rolling mechanized tanks.

SEA CADETS "AFLOAT"—Sea Cadets throughout Canada having left behind games of naval lore and tying knots, now seriously undertake four-year course in seamanship to fit them for active service with Canada's fighting forces. Membership across the Dominion has increased fourfold. Already dozens of officers and many other ranks are enrolled. First necessity in training is acquisition of navy discipline, as shown left, by smart salute given by smart, blue-clad tars of Toronto troop. At right, scout, studying wheel, is given thorough grounding in fundamentals of navy knowledge of "bends and hitches," semaphore and signal drills, gunnery, compass, steering, soundings, how to handle sail, and for would-be officers, such extras as navigation and pilotage. Aboard landlocked training "ships" in clubrooms, scouts go through full day's activities as if at sea, ending with navy's traditional sunset ceremony.
